Independence of Cuba and Armed Intervention Foreshadowed-No Offers of European Mediation Yet Received.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, April 2 .- The issue between the United States and Spain remains unchanged. No communications having any bearing upon the situation have passed between this government and Spain since last Thursday night, when Minister Woodford transmitted the reply of the Sagasta ministry to the President's proposition of two weeks ago. Both governments appear to accept this issue as made up, and are shaping their course accordingly. This being the case, the view is universally entertained, even by representative men of the administration, that Congress upon receipt of the President's message early next week will take action which it is almost surely expected must result in a severance of the relations of the two countries. This was in part foreshadowed by the action of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in agreeing to a reselution recognizing the independence Cuba, and for armed intervention, in necessary, to secure independence.

With the crisis so near at hand it is believed that if any intervention or mediation is to come it will be within the next few days. It was said, however, at the State Department late this afternoon that no offer of European mediation had yet been officially transmitted to this government. It was the general understanding that friendly overtures of this nature were looked for at any time from France or the day that the presence in Washington of Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Ireland was in connection with mediation from Rome, but it was stated on high authority at the State Department that no overtures of this char acter had taken official form, nor was the State Department advised that any such steps were in contemplation.

the understanding in officia circles, based upon information, the recognition of Cuban independence would not in itself be regarded by Spain as a casus belli. But at the sam time, there is little doubt that such recognition of Cuban independence of the Spanish Minister, and his en tire suite from Washington, and the termination of Spain's diplomatic representations at Washington. Such thing is one of the last steps preceding actual recourse to war. It is probable however, that the withdrawal of the Spanish Minister, following a recognition of the Independence of Cuba. war as it would be an emphatic protest by the Spanish government against the recognition of the independence of a colony over which Spain professes to exercise complete sovreignty. Although this recognition of ndependence is not considered a casus belli by which Spain could declare war, vet it is believed in diplomatic circles that such a step would have conse quences inevitably terminating in war. For that reason recognition of independence is likely to be no less grave than intervention.

preserve his outward calm, although he feels that the relations are extremely strained, and that his stay in Washington may not be long continued. To some of his diplomatic associates who called today, he said that his conscience was perfectly clear, as he thought that Spain's cause was a just one, and for this reason he felt no agitation. His position is trying, however; as the Spanish legation has been subjected to a number of petty indignities recently. These are of such a petty character that they have no been called to the government cials' attention, although police officers were detailed to see that the offense were not continued, and no acts of vandalism or personal indignity wer ommitted.

The State Department today received the full report of the Spanish commission which investigated the destruction of the battleship Maine. This document has been expected for some days, but it was not until today that it reached Washington by a special messenger from Havana. It proved to be a most bulky and voluminous document of far greater tense than that of the court of inquiry. The text as delivered is in Spanish and it will take some time for the elaborate document to be trans-lated. It covers at least fifteen closelywritten pages of official paper, double the size of foolscap. The Associated Press early in the week gave a complete and official report a complete and official report of this Spanish report, the re-surt of which is that the explosion of the Maine occurred inside the ship and that no evidence existed of any Admiral Irwin today was among the witnesses before the Senate Committee on Roreign Relations, which is making a thorough inquiry into the Maine disaster. His testimony was regarded as important, in meeting the position of the Spanish commission that a mine did not explode under the Maine, as no dead fish were found in the harbor. Admiral Irwin is an expert on torpedo and submarine explosions, and he told the committee that he never knew fish to be killed by such explosions.

The White House, as usual, was a central point in the great activity of the day, and the President saw many public men. Some of them urged upon the President that the Maine incident be put forward as the casus belli, the Cuban subject being subordinated to it. Among them was Representative Marsh of Illinois, who said, after talking with the President:

"I went to see the President to tell him that the basis of our declaration should be the destruction of the Maine and the slaughter of American sailors That was a foul and intentional blow at the American people, the American flag and American honor. It was done by Spanish authorities. It was this foul blow which aroused the American people. The general condition of affairs is a blow at humanity; the other was a

Many Senators, including members of the Foreign Affairs Committee and members of the House, today received telegrams from conservative men in their States counselling pacific action in Cuba. Some of them commented quite vigorously regarding them and the fact that they seem to come simultaneously from different sections.

Late this afternoon the Navy Department was informed of the sailing of the Spanish ships Pelayo and the Carlos V from Havre and Toulon, France, for Carthagena, Spain. The officials of these vessels have been at the French ports for some necessary repairs, and are returning to Carthagena, where there is a Spanish naval station, for such additional work on them as may be necessary preliminary to any active service they may be called upon to perform.

Secretary Alger today authorized an allotment of $1,000,000 from the emergency fund for the office of the Chie Engineer. The entire amount will be spent in purchasing materials for the torpedo defenses connected with the seacoast fortifications.

Gen. Wilson, Chief of Engineers acted promptly as soon as he received the allotment and authorized the commanding officer at Willett's Point. N. Y., to proceed immediaetly to contract for the material required. It will be shipped promptly to the places needing torpedo defenses, and work on them will be pressed with all possible speed.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE. President Working Hard on Forthcoming Message

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] WASHINGTON. April 2.—At 11 o'clock today a Cabinet officer said there was no change in the situation, and that he expected events would move along the present lines until the President's message was sent to Con ress early the coming week. President work of writing his message, which will be sent to Congress either on nex Monday or Tuesday. He is giving it, however, thoughtful consideration, and is taking the views of his Cabinet, and of Congress on all questions involved. It is not yet definitely decided whether the correspondence which has passed between the two countries on th ject of Cuba, will accompany the message or not.

the President has been the recognition of the independence of Cuba and in-tervention at once to end the horrors of the situation. This course has been urged especially by Senators and mem-bers of the House. The President has listened to all these views, but has not expressed his own so freely.

Appreciating the wishes of Congress that the message be transmitted at the earliest practicable moment, and the fact that a document of its grave significance and its historical character requires the utmost deliberation and consultation with his official advisors the President has determined to put aside all but the most important n ters until the message has been pu shape for submission to the national

Honolulu Harbor Needed as a Base of Operations.

Presidential Proclamation All That is Necessary to Make the Islands American Territory-St. Thomas to Be Acquired the Same Way.

IBY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES WASHINGTON, April 2.-[Exclusive Dispatch.] Annexation without a vote; Hawaiian territory under the American flag as a necessity ofwar, is the outlook, now that relations have become so strained between Spain and the United States. The publication today of a Hawaiian special that American representatives in Hawaii have instructions to raise the flag, has brought out the fact that the administration has fortified itself for just such an outcome An opinion has been prepared at the State Department on the competency of such a seizure. A decision has been reached that the President has a right to take such steps as he and his Cab inet deem necessary to the prosecution of war.

For several weeks there has been a report here that the Dole government has filled the government coal bunkers at Honolulu with 20,000 tons of fuel. which is being held for use should the United States ships need it. When these reports first came about, there was deemed slight probability that hostilities would result from differences in Cuba. Now that the situation is tense, the significance of this position of the Hawaiian government is greater than at first appeared. Honolulu would be a natural base of operations for the Asiatic squadron, and owing to the small size of Spain's fleet in the Pacific, little danger of descent upon the supplies there is feared, and no increase in the fleet usually kept in the islands is considered necessary to stand off privat-

Another report has been received here to the effect that President Dole has formally tendered the resources of the Hawaiian republic to the United States as an ally. Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said tonight they would not favor the acnecessitate the defense of the islands as an ally, while offering no compensations.

ATTEMPTED MEDIATION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] MADRID, April 3 .- 2 a.m .- The minsterial organ, El Globo, in a leading rticle, inferentially confirms the statement of the correspondent of the Associated Press, that the foreign powers are using every effort to mediate be ween the United States and Spain, and that peace is likely to result.

El Correo Española says that the mail steamer Alfonso XIII arrived at forunna on Friday, having on board two prisoners charged with an attempt to blow up the Spanish cruiser Alnirante Oquendo in Havana Harbor. It is also rumored that Julio Anibal Enriques and a correspondent of a New York newspaper were implicated in he attempted outrage.

IMMEDIATE ARMISTICE.

ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] MADRID. April 2.-Up to noon today there was no further development in the political situation. No reply from the United States government has ment here. Senor Moret, the Minister for the Colonies, has cabled his congratulations to the Cuban autonomist cabinet on the latter's manifesto to the government of the United States. The report published in the Imparcial that the United States Minister. Woodford, is preparing to leave Madrid, s entirely without foundation. Although there was a heavy decline n the bourse, which the general public regards as ominous, it is learned negotiations are progressing which will much improve the situa-

Strong pressure is being brought to ear by some of the European powers upon the Queen Regent and the Cabinet for the granting of an immediate armistice, to take effect as soon as the insurgents shall accept the proposition, thus securing time for negotiations in Cuba between the autonomist government and the insurgents, looking to the establishment of a permanent peace. It is not known what deelsion Spain will take in the matter.

ficulty in the way of Spain making such an offer is the turbulent army officers who, it is generally admitted, would endeavor to precipitate a revolution were an armistice offered at the Suggestion of the United States.

Various misleading accounts of vesterday's conferences have been published, indicating a long and impressive discussion. All that happened was that Senor Moret, the Minister for the Cold nies, read the Spanish note. Gen. Woodford, without expressing an opinion, promised to transmit it to Washington, and after the most friendly in terchange of compliments, the confer-

The Spanish counter-proposals are brief. They begin with a reference to the United States suggestions, Spain expressed regret at the "accident" and gesting that the question of Spain's responsibilary be referred to arbitration. The note then denies the good offices of the United States government in regard to the reconcentrades and an armistice. In regard to the armistice, the note says that the matter is in the hands of the Cuban government, intimating that an armistice would be granted if the insurgents asked for it

The newspapers today are extremely Jubilant over the display of patriotism at the operahouse last evening, but it was to a great extent manufactured en thusiasm. All office-holders were expected to subscribe and did so. The same is true of the army officers.

From entirely reliable information i can be asserted that the government has adopted measures to mobilize a any moment the available military officers of the country. Orders have already been given to the garrison at Madrid and other captain-generalships to reinforce all the maritime posts at a given moment, and the sappers and miners of the garrison of Logrono will proceed immediately to the Balearie

The newspapers announce that they have patriotically agreed to obey the expressed desire of the government and publish nothing respecting the movements of the army or navy.

Spain will immediately get out of foreign waters all the warships she has already purchased, lest an outbreak of hostilities render it impossible. She is adopting the same measures for war material contracted for abroad. Large orders for coal to be used for

THE POPE'S EFFORTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] LONDON, April 2 .- [Exclusive Dispatch.] A World special says it is stated on highest diplomatic authority hat the Pope is exerting himself to that the Pope is exerting himself to bring about European mediation. It is significant that until within a few dars the Pope was opposed to gapan independence, but now the Vittican policy is directed, toward obtaining terms which will provide for purchase of independence, so as to save Spain from humiliation in the eyes of the world. On Wednesday Cardinal Ram-polid reminded the Spanish Ambassafrom numination in the eyes of the world. On Wednesday Cardinal Rampoilo reminded the Spanish Ambassa dor to the Vatican that though the United States is officially Protestant, there are over twelve million Catholics who, as American citizens, are not less faithful sons of the church than the Spaniards, and their feelings and interests must be not less dear to His Holiness, but a strange thing is that according to the Vatican's information, the United States might welcome the 'Pope's arbitration, while Spain would acept it, if at all, with the important reservation that the independence of Cuba should not come within the terms of the reference. The Pope knows that such restricted mediation would be futile. He is deeply grieved at Spain's obstinacy, which hean see leads directly to war, and he is under no delusion as to the issue of the struggle. He has, in fact, already decided upon a policy which will be the recognition of accomplished facts.

Ships That Can Be Mustered in Case of War. [ASSOCIATED PRESS MIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, April 2.-An interesting compilation of the naval strength available by Spain in case of war has been issued by Col. Wagner, chief of the military information division. It shows the total number of ships, including those now building by Spain, to be over 100. The compilation, however, does not include coast defense vessels proper, nor a number of small special cratts employed by the Spainsh government in special waters or under special circumstances. There are eleven armored ships of an aggregate tonnage of over $1,000, all of which, except three, have a speed of twenty knyts or more. Safeguards Vouched American Citizens by the Authorities-United States Vessels Reported Patroling the North Coast of Cuba.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] HAVANA [Via Key West,] April 2.— The strong persuasion put forth by men of good judgment probably prevented demonstration here on Thursday night, when a story was bruited about that war had been declared. Police precautions were doubled, and Amerians were advised to stay around the

Yesterday it was reported at the pal ice that three United States war ves-els had been seen patrolling the north oast of Cuba. Whether this is tru or not, the correspondents have no means of knowing, but certainly it was means of knowing, but certainly it was believed at the palace. It may have had something to do with the departure of the Vizcaya and Oquendo from the harbor, though it has been known for some time that these vessels were getting ready to sail at any moment. The lower classes here think that the vessels, which they deem invulnerable, have gone to Key West to destroy the United States fleet if war is declared.

The bodies of the victims of the explosion which have not been recovered, numbering seventy-five or seventy-six, are by this time probably completely disintegrated, but arrangements can be made with the local authorities, should any bodies appear upon the surface, they will be cared for and shipped north by the Ward line steamer.

La Lucha, in an editorial under the La Lucha, in an editorial under the caption, "Commerce in Philanthropy and Charity," today says that many business houses in Havana have ceased buying supplies outide the island, finding it possible to get their stocks more cheaply in other ports of Cuba. PEACE OR WAR.

How Our British Cousins View the Situation. [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, April 2.- [By Atlantic Ca de. Copyrighted, 1898, by the Associ ated Press.l The hervousness of the stock markets, which was emphasized by a sudden drop of 3 per cent. in Spanish 4's at the opening of the Stock Exchange, has been fully reflected in diplomatic circles, which have experi-enced almost as much difficulty as outsiders in extracting facts from the mass sidersin extracting facts from the mass of contradictory statements regarding the Hispaño-American crisis today. Beyond opining generally that matters were approaching a crisis there was not a man in London of real weight who was willing to risk an opinion as to whether the outcome would be peace or war. Even now there is a difference of opinion, but the distinctly warlike tones of the great mass of evidence, and the marked divergence of the United States demands and Spain's proposals, have led the majority to conproposals, have led the majority to conclude that the parting of the ways ha een reached unless, within a ours, Señor Sagasta is able to assurances that the delay he asks for ill insure the complete freedom of

To the last, therefore, it is hoped that a solution will be found, even when Spain is apparently untractible.

The best-informed persons believe Spain is only temporizing, and it is recognized that there is difficulty in the Spanish government accepting without demur the Jemands of the United States, in view of the danger of a revolution and the overthrow of the monarchy.

So, though realizing the imminence of hostilities, the apparent hopeless ness of averting war has come as shock." though realizing the imminence of events, there are a few hopeful people left.

James Price, M.P., the former president of the Board of Trade, and author of "The American Commonweaith," is quoted as saying: "Somehow, I fancy that, as near as the two nowers may have drifted toward war, we are not going to witness sefricitiful a calamity. I know President McKinley and his administration and I know they do not wish for war. In fact, none of the really clear-headed men in the United States want war. They can see too far ahead."

Onlinons, in London have been little influenced by the specious character of Schor Sagasta's counter proposais. As one official of the Foreign Office remarked: "The Americans will naturally decline to accept such proposals as a sufficient guarantee that a power which has so long and patiently failed to discharge its duties in humane administration, cannot be trusted to give effect to convenion.

The positive semi-official declaration telegraphed last night to the Associated Press from Madrid in which it was announced that no proposition containing the slightest allusion to the independence of Cuba, either with or without indemnity, has been made to the Spanish government, that the government would straightway reject any such proposition, and there is no party or statesman in Spain disposed to listen to such a solution of the crisis, has created a mild sensation here, as it has been assumed that the independence of Cuba was the crux of the difficulty. It has even been suggested in pro-Spanish circles that the war party in the United States launched this device in order to upset diplomatic negotiations at Madrid.

Spanish circles here have been ex-upset dipiomatic negotiations at analorfd.

Spanish circles here have been excited by the publication of an interview with the Spanish Consul-General here, Señor Jurado, which conveyed the impression that if the settlement of the difficulty was left to the Spaniards of London, Spain would fight; but other people here point out that the Spaniards do not realize the volcano which is beneath them. They suspect the United States of "bluffing," and believe that she is afraid to come to close quarters. In addition, the Spaniards have a profound faith in the infallibility of their fleet.

From the extraordinary activity at the Spanish Legation here, it is evident that Spain is seeking the friendly offices of the Foreign Office. Indeed, it is generally thought that the frequent visits of the French, Austrian, Russian and Spanish Ambassadors to the British Foreign Office is connected with the Cuban situation.

The newspapers reaching the stage of regarding war between the United States and Spain inevitable are printing maps of the area of probable operations, details regarding the fleets, the facts concerning the troops, armaments, preparedness of the medical corps, etc. The naval experts dwell upon Spain's disadvantages in having to act at such a distance from her naval base. One high authority recalled an interesting impression derived abroad from a Spanish man-of-war, that the element which will tend seriously to the detriment of the Spanish navy will be found in the impression derived abroad from a Spanish man-of-war, that the element which will tend seriously to the detriment of the Spanish navy will be found in the contempt with which the superiors regard their inferiors. He said:

"They all look dupon the rank and file as completely beneath them, and entertained a sort of feudal scorn for their subordinates."

The Statist anticipates hostilities, which it regards as imminent, though it does not relinquish the hope that it will cause a big advance in the money market in London. The paper thinks the United States will require a large loan, which will find a ready market here, especially as, under the circumstances, the government will have no difficulty in inducing Congress to make the interests and the principal payable in gold.

Assistant Secretary Day had a long close conference with the President, and made a number of suggestions as to the treatment of the discussion of the situation to be set forth in the forthcoming message. for a brief interview. Abner McKinley came in from New York on an early train, and was at the White House for a few minutes.

Senator Frye of Maine had a personal interview with the President. It is said the purpose of Mr. Frye's cali was to ascertain when the message of the President might be expected, so as to guide the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in its work. It is known that Senator Frye is for vigorous action and would like to see the coming message take strong grounds which will unite Congress and the administration in a firm policy to secure the independence of Cuba by intervention at once.

Senator Wolcott of Colorado, Elkins of West Virginia, Spooner of Wisconsin, Gear of Iowa, and Representative Hull, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, also had brief interviews with the President. Mr. Hull's conference related to the Army Organization Bill. The President expressed his desire that the bill should be enacted into law at the earliest possible moment, and said that it was wise to have it on the statute books in readiness for carrying out its war footing provisions in view of the expected serious culmination of the present crisis. At the close of the conference, Mr. Hull said the army bill would doubtless be passed by the House next Monday, and that a few incidental changes received would be corrected by amendments when the bill is acted upon by the Senate. There is much significance in the early date fixed upon for bringing that bill up in Congress. The bill is an administration measure and provides for the adoption of a three battailon war formation in war times.

About 11:30 'ciock, Secretary Long brought over some friends to present to the President. He stated that there had been no developments.

Secretary Alger called with some department papers. Secretaries Long and Alger both denied the report of the recall of Minister Woodford.

Secretary Gage and Representative Dingley of Maine, chairman of the House Ways and weans Committee, were summoned by the President during the forenoon.

this phase of the question may to some extent figure in the President's message.

There is reason for the belief that a war revenue measure has been under consideration and it is not improbable that a bill of this character may be introduced at the same time, if it is not, indeed, made a part of the expected bill or resolution authorizing the President to intervene forcibly to put a stop to hostilities in Cuba.

No definite plan, or even an outline of a plan to raise war revenue from internal revenue sources has yet been formulated, but it is the belief of the persons who necessarily would be consulted in the matter that legislation for an additional tax on beer is al most certain, in the event of hostilities to be recommended to Congress. Whisky, it is said, also would come in for a share of the increase, but for the fact that the present rate of $1.10 pegallon, in the opinion of experienced revenue officials, is really above the maximum revenue production point. There is no reasonable doubt that quite a list of articles that are regarded as luxuries will be considered by the Ways and Means Committee, as objects of revenue legislation in cas any large amount of funds is needed to carry on the war, which nearly al visitors to the White House said now seemed inevitable. Treasury experts have estimated that the increase of the tax on beer from $1 to $2 per barrel would result in a gain of approximately, $40,000,000 a year to the revenues, but whether so heavy an increase as that is contemplated is not known.

The question of laying a small internal revenue tax on tea and coffee question of laying a small in ternal revenue tax on tea and coffer is also under consideration. It is thought that a tax of something less thought that a tax of something less than 10 cents a pound on tea, and about 3 cents a pound on coffee would bring in a large revenue, possibly $35.000,000 or $40,000,000 a year. This tax, it is thought, would not result in materially increasing the price to the consumer of either tea or coffee, except possibly in the beginning. The combined revenues from tea and coffee. The most important, and, in fa't, the only essential addition, is a para graph fixing the responsibility upon Spain for the Maine disaster and citing this as a cause for American resentment, if not for war.

The committee was in communication with the President during the day, and was informed that while the President would make an earnest effort to get his message to Congress on Monday, he might not be able, on account of the might not be able, on account of the great demands upon his time, to get it in before Tuesday. There has been some doubt as to what recommendations the President would make, if any, in his message, but he gave the members of the Senate who called upon him today to understand that he would recommend both recognition of independence and a declaration in favor of intervention. This would be in accord with the committee's action. tee's action.

Forces-Sweeping Investigatio into the Maine Disaster. [ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]
WASHINGTON, April 2.—Secretary Long pushed the naval preparations ahead today as rapidly as possible.
Admiral Walker arrived in Washington today and reported in person to Secretary Long. The admiral has been at the head of the commission investigating the route of the proposed Nicaraguan Canal. His return caused comments as to his possible choice for taking supreme command of all the naval forces on the Atlantic. While he is on ing supreme command of all the naval forces on the Atlantic. While he is on the retired list, he is not less subject to duty in case of need, and there is reason to believe that the admiral whin regard it as a privilege to renew active service. The proposed assignment has not been given any consideration by Secretary Long, and if this matter should be taken up there are naval officers in the active list, notably Admiral Bunce, who would enter into the question.

ficers in the active list, hotally and miral Bunce, who would enter into the question.

Admiral Walker looked bronzed and rugged. He would not discuss what the commission had accomplished, nor refer to his future plans in connection with the navy.

Senator Foraker of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations was at the Navy Department for the purpose, it is understood, of furthering the investigation that the committee is making into the cause of the disaster to the Maine. The investigation is to be very sweeping and is to go considerably beyond the inquiry of the naval court. That court was restricted to some extent by having to take the testimony of those willing to appear, and also was hampered by other restrictions. But in reaching the matter of cause, the Senate commission has considerably greater latitude. Capt. Sigsbee has already appeared before the committee and has given his testimony in detail.

To show the minuteness of the Senate inquiry the fact may be cited that the Senate today took steps to ascertain whether the electric lights throughout Havana were extinguished simultaneously with the explosion. The Senate learned that the extinguishment of the lights actually occurred. What bearing this had upon the cause of the exiter.

learned that the extinguishment of the lights actually occurred. What bearing this had upon the cause of the explosion is not apparent. It may be that the terrific shock caused an electric disturbance, disabling the electric plant in Havana, or that some infernal deductions may be made as to the electric currents which connect with a submarine mine.

deductions may be made as to the electric currents which connect with a submarine mine.

The naval orders today were the longest the Secretary has issued in many months, there being forty-five distinct assignments. Of these, thirty were of naval cadets of the first-class at the academy at Annapolis, assigned to various ships. They were to graduate on Monday next. As a rule the time of graduation is three months later than this.

The Secretary of the Navy issued an order today closing the Washington navy yard to visitors. This order takes effect tomorrow and will continue as long as present conditions exist.

The order was based on recommendations of the commandant of the navy yard, who said that the number of visitors has become so large of late as to interfere with the prosecution of the important work in progress.

The Anyl Department has been informed of the departure of the gunbaat Marietta from Callao, Peru, to Valparaiso, Chile. Although the officials will not say so, it is generally understood that this vessel has been detached from duty on the Pacific Coast station, and ordered to join the fleet at Key West with as little delay as possible. Similar orders will be given to the commander of the battleship Oregon.

possible. Similar orders will be given to the commander of the battleship Oregon.

The old-fashioned steamer Standish attached to the Naval Academy, having accomplished the business which brought her here, left here last evening for Annapolis. She brought a cargo of old guns, which had been stored away at the academy, but were somewhat out of repair. They will be put into as good condition as possible at the Washington gun factory, and sent to points where they can do the most good.

Assistant Secretary Meiklejohn of the War Department, received a telegram today from J. G. Dewar, secretary of the Omaha Lodge of Elks, No. 39, saying that that organization has unanimously adopted resolutions that "all Elks will be found loyal to home and country," to which end they pledged their "lives and sacred honor."

As neither branch of Congress was in session, a great number of the members of both houses called at the State, War and Navy departments.

During the morning, there was also a meeting of the joint board of army and navy on the plan of defense. This board consists of Caot. Barker of the navy, and Col. Wagner of the army, They are considering the question of the most desirable point in the South to be used as a central base of operation in case of hostilities. While they were in session they were furnished a statement showing the total strength of the Spanish navy, including a description of each ship. The question the board is now considering was two nights ago the subject of investigation by the War Department, and the question of the practicability of Mobile or Tampa as a base of supplies. The army concentrated in the South, was then reviewed. Gen. Miles is of the opinion that 100,000 men could be transported to any point on the Gulf or the Atlantic coasts in the South, within forty-eight hours after the call to arms. That this can be done was demonstrated by the railroads during a recent big celebration in Washington, when 100,000 men were brought to the city, and taken out again inside of twenty-four hours.

Among Secretary Alger's callers were Senators Cullom, Pascoe, Platt, and Representatives Hull and Dingley. Shortly after 12 o'clock the Secretary left for the Wite House, where he had some business to transact with the President. During the morning, he also saw a number of chiefs of the department and Gen Miles.

The $500,000 allotted to the quarter maste senators continued to the purpose of meeting any expenses incident to shipment of troops, stores, guns and other munitions of war that cannot be made in an annual appropriation.

Navy Department Officials Have All

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] WASHINGTON, April 2.-Constant novements of officials, numberless coerences and a large Congressional co tingent that was on hand, made today a busy one at the Navy Department. There were, however, no new or sensational developments in the situation. Secretary Long said there had been no orders as yet issued to the "flying Secretary Long said there had been no orders as yet issued to the "flying squadron" now at Hampton Roads. The department is taking active steps to secure a number of smaller class of ships. The purchase of two, the Creole, belonging to a line running out of New York, and the yacht Josephine, has been consummated, while orders have been telegraphed to agents of the government to purchase the following: The yacht Sovereign, belonging to a New York man, and the Lebanon, the Saturn and the Irrawaddy. The latter three are colliers, and will be used, if necessary to accompany the fleets and carry extra supplies of coal. The Saturn, it is understood, will be delivered to the government in New York early next week. The Creole will be used as a hospital ship.

The action of the Senate in refusing to sanction the purchase of the Danish island of St. Thomas, a coaling station, was a source of much regret to the officials of the department, though the naval authorities have not yet abandoned hope of securing a coaling station.

Gen. Miles Designs Appropriate Cos tumes for His Men.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Gen. Miles, commanding the army, after con-ferring with Secretary Alger, has ordered 100 canvas uniforms, with a view to their general introduction as a light and serviceable field uniform by the United States army. It is marked departure in uniforming the army, and one in the interest of preserving the health of the men while in active service. The sample uniforms already ordered are of strong canvas, of active service. The sample uniforms already ordered are of strong canvas, of a fine texture, but durable material. The color is a gray brown, said to be particulally desirable in time of hostilities, as it is difficult to be distinguished from the earth, grass, cornfields or dead leaves. It is light and cool in summer, is very serviceable in winter and impervious to the rain. The canvas suits are already in use among frontiersmen, and do good service in rough outdoor work.

Gen. Miles's idea has been to combine this serviceable frontier suit with enough color and adornment to give i a military aspect. The final des gn show the canvas suit and buckskin leggings, with colored cuffs, colars, chevrons and national coat of a.ms over the chevrons. The color of the cuffs, etc., depends upon arms of the service, in navy blue for the iniantry, ed for the artillery and yellow for the cavalry. The hat is of light felt or of canvas, similar to that now worn, but turned on the left side, with a colored rosette indicating the arm of the service and a short aignette or plumabove the rosette. The knee breeches and leggings complete this serviceable military field uniform.

Secretary Long, detained at a dinner, arrived late and stopped a few moments. The President's arrival was the signal for an outburst of cheering. He refused to take advantage of the general movement to make way for him, preferring to remain in line and meet the Maine's commander when his time came. As he reached him, the President grasped his hand, with the remark: 'Captain, it gives me great pleasure to have the honor of meeting you," and with a few brief words of congratulation, passed on to the ballroom, amid cheering and the strains of "Hail to the Chief."

The Josephine will go at once to the League Island navy yard to have her guns mounted. She is a new vessel, of 500 tons, built about a year ago, and is fast and staunch. The Creole is the first of the merchant vessels to be pressed into service. She was built at Newport News a year ago, and is practically new. Her displacement is over 2000 tons, and with 1500-ho se power, she can make fourteen knots continuously. As soon as she can discharge her cargo at New York, for which a day is allowed, she will go to Newport News, where preparations have been made to receive here, and work on her night and day until she is ready to follow Commodore Schley's lying squadron. It is expected that he changes can be made in less than a week, if necessary, the most essential modifications being the removal of staterooms, the cutting of larger ports in her sides, and the introduction of a 9000-gallon fresh water tank. Three hundred cots and all the requisite ap pliances to convert the vessel into a sospital ship have already been ordered, and will be quickly put on board. the coastwise steamer Creole

WHIPPED HIS FATHER. James Nettles Acquitted of a Charge

James Nettles Acquitted of a Charge of Felony.

James Nettles, who was arrested several days ago on complaint of his father, who charged him with assault with intent to commit murder, was discharged from custody yesterday in Justice Owens's court. The evidence showed that his father had come to where he was working at the Hotel Lilly drunk and had made demands upon him for his salary. In the quarrel which followed, Nettles gave his father a severe beating with his fists, and in falling the old man fractured two rfos. He swore that the boy struck him so hard with his fists that his ribs were fractured. On the other hand, the young man staked that he had been compelled to use violence on his father to keep him quiet. Nettles's father is also known by the name of Campbell. He said he went into the Union army under that name, and if he changed it now he would lose his pension. Campbell was arrested early yesterday morning before the case was called on a charge of drunkenness. As soon as the other case was disposed of, he was fined $10.

Forest Goes Enst.

Dr. W. E. Forest is now en route to New York to answer to a charge of embezzling $5900. Despairing of the success of any further efforts to evade extradition, he gave up the fight, and yesterday morning Detective Price of New York left for the East with him. In spite of the alleged breach of faith on part of the prisoner, the New York officer treated him with all the consideration possible. Forest was not handcuffed, nor was he equipped with an Oregon boot. Mrs. Forest did not accompany him. Forest Goes East.

Mrs. Rorer is one of the most eminent au thorities on food in America. She knows that Americans go on day by day using food and drink that sap their vitality instead of building it up, and it requires argument oft re-peated to wake them up. Broken wrecks of their cherished plans, are all about us, and their physical weakness is nearly always due to improper food and drink. Coffee is a skilled destroyer of nervous strength. Postum Food Coffee is a delicious, food drink made from selected parts of cereals that yield the elements nature demands for rebuilding the nerve tissues all over the human body. If it has ever been served to you in a weak, unpalatable drink, have it made over again and use two spoons to each cup and know that the actual boiling continues full fifteen minutes. Our word for it, the Postum Coffee is delicious when properly made.

HOFF CONVICTED.

Murder in the First Degree-Death Sentence Tuesday.
[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.-It required the jury but twenty-five minutes to convict Albert Hoff of murder in the first degree for the death of Mrs. Mary L. Chute December 15 last. Next Tuesday morning was fixed as the time for the passage of the death sentence. While the jury was out, Hoff displayed signs of great nervousness

As soon as the verdict was rendered Hoff evinced additional emotion by his deathly pallor. He said nothing and attempted no demonstration. He recovered himself a little later and as the handcuffs were being locked, said: "Well, it will soon be over. Touchet."

the handcuffs were being locked, said:
"Well, it will soon be over. Tonight I will have a glass of steam beer and will sleep in a good bed."
The evidence against Hoff was entirely circumstantial. The district attorney suggested three possible motives: First, anger because he had not secured expected employment; second, robbery; third, assault. Hoff's defense was an alleged alibi.

Consumption Cured.

That science has fully triumphed over the dreaded affliction of tuberculosis is fully established by the remarkable record o cures by Dr. W. Harrison Ballard, of the city. The affliction and cure of consumption in Dr. Ballard constituted the incentive that led to the discovery by himself of the modification of the Koch's tuberculin which completely solves the final treatment and cure of tuberculosis. The strong point of the discovery is that it reveals an absolute cure its success is as complete as it is gratifying. Chiffonier Day Tomorrow

That these special Monday events have so rapidly grown in popularity as to become one of the fixed and important features of the city's merchandising is due to the following facts:

FEELING OF RELIEF.

EY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, April 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The announcement that the Spanish torpedo flotilla was at Cape de Verde Islands. off the west coast of Africa, instead of Porto Rico, was received with a good deal of satisfaction at the Navy Department, which was without information as to the whereabouts of the flotilla. The islands are more than 2000 miles from Porto Rico, and it is the supposition of the naval experts that at the best ten or twelve days will be the least time within which they could make the run across.

A NAVAL MYSTERY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]
WASHINGTON, April 2.—[Exclusiv Dispatch.] A Sun special says: "A mys tery the Navy Department would lik cleared up is, what has become of the second division of the torpedo-boat flo-tilla. There has never been any relia-ble information received here that this second division left Spain for the Canaries, as reported. It is the under-standing of the department that the Five Hundred Indian Baskets of All Kinds and Prices, from $1 to $25, to Be

There is fear that the second division joined the first division joined the first division in the second division divi vision, parted from it later, and is now on the way to Porto Rico. The first division consists of three torpedo-boat destroyers; three torepdo boats, and : merchant steamship. The second divi ion was reported to consist of sever destroyers and six torpedo boats and a transport acting as a convoy, but nothing to show that this information while a few officers are inclined to think that the second division is now on its way to Porto Rico, nearly all those connected with the naval administration believe that this is not so stration believe that this is not so They think they would have been in formed officially if the second division had left a Spanish port.

Spanish Warships Vizcaya Oquendo Leave Havana. [BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, April 2.-[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Evening World prints a copyrighted dispatch dated April 1 on board the World's dispatch boat Triton, via Key West, which says: "The Spanish warships Vizcaya and Triton, via Key West, which says:

"The Spanish warships Vizcaya and Oquendo no longer lie like big watchdogs across Havana harbor. They are on their way to Porto Rico. The World's dispatch boat followed them until this was made certain. They left their moorings at 3 o'clock this afternoon and started eastward along the north coast of Cuba. For days both of the big Spanish cruisers have been ready to sail at an hour's notice. Their coabunkers were filled almost two weeks ago. Late last night a package of scaled orders was sent out to the two warships from the office of the Aimirante on La Machina wharf. Early this morning preparations for their departure were begun. Boat after boat, loaded down to the gunwales with provisions, started out from Havana wharves to the Vizcaya and Oquendo. The World correspondent boarded the Vizcaya at 10 o'clock. He was received courteously by Capt. Eulate. "All I know about it," said he, "is that we are going away, but where, I have not the faintest idea. Our orders are scaled, and I shall not open them until I am several miles out at sea." A correspondent was put on board the Triton with orders to follow the cruisers. The correspondent's narrative continues: "As soon as the two ships reached the open gulf they turned to the west-the Vizcaya leading the Oquendo by half a mile.

"Down the coast to the eastward of Havana the two men-of-war passed in procession. At a distance of seven miles from the land the Triton paralleled their course, sailing at about the same rate of speed. As the sun dropped down below the horizon the Vizcaya and Oquendo became lost to view in the shadow of the long green hills of the shore.

"The two ships had increased their speed a little by this time, and were jogging along at about fifteen knots. They kept well within the five-mile limit. Most of the time they were not more than a mile from shore. The Triton followed the Vizcaya and Oquendo until they rounded Point Guanos.

"Point Guanos is twenty-sight miles."

Oquendo until they rounded Point Guanos.

"Point Guanos is twenty-eight miles eastward of Havana. Had either of the two men-of-war had an idea of getting to United States ports, they certainly would have turned north at Point Guanos. But they did not.

"At a speed of sixteen knots an hour they kept on eastward. The course that they followed is one indicated by the charts as being most direct to Porto Rico."

WORKING ON THE MESSAGE. Will Not Be Sent to Congress Before

Tuesday.
[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] WASHINGTON, April 2.—The quiet-ude of the White House tonight was in ude of the White House tonight was in striking contrast with the intense activity and repressed excitement of the past few days. For several hours the President was alone in his private library busily engaged in the preparation of his forthcoming message to Congress. No callers were received except by appointment, and with the two or three whom the President did see, early in the evening, he conversed very briefly.

see, early in the evening, he conversed very briefly.

At 11:30 o'clock Gen. Grosvenor announced positively, after an extended conference with the President, that the message would not be sent to Congress before next Tuesday. The participants in the conference were Senator Hanna, Gen. Grosvenor and Judge A. C. Thompson, president of the Criminal Law Classification Committee. Atty.-Gen. Griggs was present a short time. Gen. Grosvenor said there was nothing new in the Spanish situation tonight.

Not the slightest change is percept "Not the slightest change is perceptible," said he. "The President is carefully considering his message and it will be a memorable state document. "No," he replied, to an inquiry, "it will not be sent to Congress on Monday. It will not go before Tuesday. It is no child's play to prepare such a paper as the President will give to Congress and the country. It will thoroughly review all of this government's diplomatic negotiations with Spain relative to Cuba, and will contain such recommendations as will appeal to the sense nendations as will appeal to the sense of right and justice of the American triotic and devoted to his country as he is."

"Do you expect any action by Congress on Monday in advance of the President's message?" Gen. Grosvenor was asked.

"Oh, no;" he replied. "Congress will be entirely, willing to await the action of the President. He will communicate to Congress and to the country as soon as possible and there is no doubt that Congress will respect his desires in the matter."

During the conference, the Associated Press news that the Spanish torpedo flotilla had not yet arrived at Port Rico, and that the probabilities were that it was now at the Cape Verde Islands, was communicated to the President. [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERLIN, April 2.-[Copyrighted, 1898, by the Associated Press.] The sentiment in Germany in official and unofficial circles early today was that the Hispano-American crisis has veered considerably during the course of the week, and is now decidedly more favorable to the United States. This, it is asserted, is partly due to the moderation of President McKinley and the conservative manner in which United States Minister Woodford has dealt with the authorities at Madrid, and partly to the bitterness engendered by the alleged wanton attack of a band of insurgents upon the German sugar refineries at Connected with the refinery, on March 18, which has taught Germany that Spain is unable to protect even the lives of foreigners in Cuba. As previously announced, the German Foreign Office is demanding immediate and full redress for this outrage, and a German warship will soon be sent to Havana if satisfaction is not by the Associated Press.] The sentiment

Foreign Office is demanding immediate and full redress for this outrage, and a German warship will soon be sent to Havana if satisfaction is not forthcoming in short order. The Spanish Ambassador here. Señor Mendez de Vigo, has had lengthy conferences with Baron von Buelow, the German Minister for Foreign Affairs, who convinced the Ambassador that Germany intended to have complete satisfaction, including an indemnity for the property destroyed, and for the lives taken. The Ambassador was also informed that unless the redress was forthcoming Germany herself would act, secure damages and punish the offenders. As an incentive to quick reparation, Baron von Buelow added that provisional orders had been cabled to the commander of the German warship Geier to sail in the direction of Cuba. The Spanish Ambassador promised that he would exert himself to the utmost to comply with the German demands.

The newspapers here are also changing their line and now concede in the main the justice of the American demands, acknowledging that Washington has acted with moderation which many another government would not have shown under similar circum-

many another government would not have shown under similar circumstances. The Cologne Gazette, the Vossische Zeitung, the Lokal Anzeiger and other leading newspapers highly eulogize President McKinley's statesmanship, and express confidence that whatever he ultimately decides will be dictated by some good reason.

whatever he ultimately decides will be dictated by some good reason.
United States Ambassador Andrew D. White in an interview said that thus far, acting under instructions from Washington, he had not formally inquired of the German government what its attitude would be in the event of war. He had nevertheless been repeatedly assured informally by Baron von Buelow that Germany will in no case assume an unfriendly attitude toward the United States, nor join in any possible combination of the powers having that end in view.

In regard to Emperor William's personal views, Mr. White said His Majesty had been grossly misrepresented by the foreign press. The Emperor has repeatedly given Mr. White to understand that he felt most favorably disposed toward the United States, and his sympathies are with the United States in this crisis.

It is learned on unexceptionable authority that so far from the Sunday sympatines are with the United States in this crisis.

It is learned on unexceptionable authority that so far from the Sunday special dispaches from Berlin of Saturday last being Emperor William's views, the facts are that soon after the loss of the battleship Maine, during a dinner party. His Majesty asked a number of admirals for their opinion as to the cause of the disaster. The admirals thought it was due to an internal explosion, whereupon the Emperor briefly remarked that he differred from them. Since then he has repeated his opinion on several occasions.

In honor of the birthday of Prince Bismarck it has been decided to give his old head forester. Lange, the full amount of pension he claimed, and for which he sued the Prince.

It is worthy of notice that in toasting Prince Bismarck on board the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Emperor William referred to him as "His Serene Highness." This appears to be the final acceptance of a situation forced upon Emperor William by the former Chancellor, who has always refused to acknowledge the title of Duke of Laurenburg, which the Emperor wishes to be known under. WILL TAKE PROMPT ACTION.

BANGKOK (Slam.) April 2.—[By Asiatic Cable.] Sir Nicholas Hannon, the arbitrator between the estate of the late Dr. W. A. Cheek, an American citizen, and the government of Siam, has decided in favor of the Cheek estate, thus sustaining all the contentions of Mr. Barrett, the United States Consul-

General tere.

The government of Siam advanced large sums of money to Cheek to work the teak concessions. Cheek contracted to haul teak logs from the interior of the jungles to the main streams, and for this purpose had purchased a large number of elephants.

Owing, however, to a prolonged fire gun, has just invented a gun that, in its awful destructive force, goes far beyond Hiram Maxim's. It is called the Maxim aerial torpedo, and is designed for coast defense and naval work.

As its name implies, the torpedo is fired into air instead of being shee along the surface of the water. In fact, it is used the same as any cannon or mortar. The gun from which it is fired has a bore of twenty-six inches. It will throw a ton of dynamite a distance of five miles, and if the torpedo strikes

The stable divided favoritism at the post time with W. L. Appleby's Linstock, with Jockey Tod Sloan in the saddle. Two to one was the ruling price on these contestants, the odds fluctuating more or less. The race had a very open appearance, however, and it is believed that as much money was wagered on the chances of the other three entries as poured in on the favorites.

wagered on the chances of the other three entries as poured in on the favorites.

Contrary to the general expectation, the start was one of the poorest evergiven in an event of this importance, the field being somewhat strung out as the barrier was raised, and Napamax, who was considered the most dangerous of the Burns & Waterhouse entry, was caught in the webbing and left. Before Clawson could disentangle his mount the balance of the field had traversed fully a quarter of a mile. After trailing in pursuit of the field for a furlong or two, Clawson, realizing the hopelessness of such a chase, wisely pulled his mount up.

Traverser was the first to show in front as the barrier flew up, and passing the stand had increased his lead to three lengths. His stable mate, Recreation, upon whom Thorpe had the mount, took good care to keep the second division at a respectable distance from the flying leader, and in doing so repeatedly cut off Linstock, which greately militated against the latter's chances of winning.

Traverser made all the running, and maintained his lead of three lengths until the saddling paddock was reached, when the rapid pace began to tell, and he exhibited signs of faltering. Clayton, however, rated him along with admirable judgment, and the colt lasted long enough to beat the fast-coming Borgla out by a length. Recreation was third, three lengths behind Borgla.

was third, three lengths behind Borgia.

The latter colt, who is a full brother to The Roman, furnished the sensation of the day, as this was his initial start. He was badly messed about, and coming from the rear division in the stretch, rapidly overhauled the leader, and doubtless would have annexed the rich event had there been a few yards further to travel. Borgia is by Imp. Brutus-Ledette, and is owned by the Elmwood stock farm of San José.

Always preserve your self-respect. "Always preserve your self-respect.

The Money Situation.

The Money Situation.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The Financier says: The statement of the associated branks of New York City for the week ending April 1 shows an increase of $1,889,525 in excess of reserve, but it is evident that the gold imports to the present movement began there has been received in New York over $29,000,000 in specie, but the specie increases, as reported by the banks since the first receipts are less than $22,000,000 in specie, but the specie increases, as reported by the banks since the first receipts are less than $22,000,000 in specie, but the specie increases as reported by the banks since the first receipts are less than $22,000,000 in specie, but the specie increases of $1,317,200, due to general liquidation in stocking exchange collateral, while deposits decreased $3,413,700. The shrinks age in deposits probably represents, in part, withdrawals by interior banks since the movement of currency is once more against this center, but the loss $4,25,000 in legal tenders appears to be in excess of the known shipments and the expansion in excess reserve a experiment should be spansion in excess reserve a serve and the spansion in excess reserve as the serves have increased in proportion. Counting the gold nown in shipment and larger amounts which can be obtained without trouble, they are prepared to meet the spansion in excess reserve as the serve of the match and the spansion in excess reserve are bound to the gold the spansion of the country banks and the exception of the country banks and the expansion in excess reserve to warrant anything like a panic. The chief apprehension is in the money market, on fears of a further gold drain to New York in the event of war. The Bank of England reserve last week was the lowest since 1893.

"War risks are nominally quoted at 40 per cent., but such transactions are merely of a betting nature, not genuine business. Americans were flat, but above the New York parity all day. Cape gold and Japanese yen to arrive next week have been practically engaged for New York."

RAILROAD PROBLEM APPEARS TO

Representatives of English Capital California and Mexic Favor Constructing a Road to Yuma-Len-ten Oratorio Rendered.

SAN DIEGO, April 2 .- [Regular Corespondence.] Recent moves on the lo-cal checker-board seem to bring the railroad problem nearer to a solution.
Charles Cheston of London, chairman Mexican Land and Colonization Company, limited, of the Lower California Development Company, limited, and also of the Peninsular California Rail way Company, limited, is now on this Coast, accompanied by I. A. Packard, the new general manager of these companies. Both are at Ensenada, where Mr. Packard is busy taking over his office from Hon. Ernest Allsopp, the former manager. Mr. Cheston is known to be strongly in favor of the development of the peninsula by a railroad, and Mr. Packard coincides with this view.

changes in the board of directors of the London corporations.

Judge George Fuller of this city, formerly counsel for the Ensenada companies, has been in correspondence with Mr. Allsopp, and it is said he has received assurances that the English companies are ready to do their share toward building a railroad, under their concession from the Mexican government, providing the San Diego people will build to connect with this city, either at Ensenada or some point along the line to Yuma. This would develop the peninsula at a rapid rate and enable the company to comply with its contract with the government for the settlement of colonists, while giving San Diego an almost direct eastern outlet.

Mr. Cheston, when approached on this matter, said it was of such importance that he could not give a decided opinion without conferring with the London board. Yet he ventured the opinion that it was the best possible course for his company to pursue, in view of the present difficulties of colonizing Lower California. He realized the immense advantage of a railroad, and predicted that it would pay after the first year or two. Personally, he was strongly in favor of the plan, but the matter of raising the construction funds, and the arrangement with San Diego were questions to be deliberated carefully.

Mr. Cheston will be in the city April 6, and a conference has been arranged between him and a committee of the Railroad Committee of the latter body will also be present. This will be a private meeting, and it is not expected that the public will be made acquainted with the result. The Railroad Committee consists of U. S. Grant, Capt. Matthew Sherman, Postmaster Luce, C. L. Josselyn, Alderman A. E. Nutt and W. M. King.

It is a coincidence that Alderman nutt has gone out on the desert, along the line of the proposed railroad, and when he returns, which will be in a few days, he may have some important information for the rest of the committee.

days, he may have some important information for the rest of the committee.

The Mexican Land and Colonization Company and its allied corporations have a liberal contract with the Mexican Environment, whereby a subvention of about $13,000 per mile, gold, is payable upon the completion of stated portions of the railroad in Lower California. As projected, the railroad will run from Ensenada to Yuma, connecting there with the Southern Pacific and also with a railroad projected through the Mexican State of Sonora.

The distance from the nearest point on the line to San Diego would be about fifty miles, which San Diego would be called upon to build. Of this, about thirty-five miles will be in Mexican territory. If it is decided to run the line from San Diego down the coast to Ensenada, instead of inland, the distance will be about seventy miles. The inland route is generally preferred by the San Diegans, who have had information on the proposed deal, for the reason that it is just that much nearer to a direct road east.

Some objection to the plan has developed on account of the fact that the road, running to Yuma-only, will be connecting only with the Southern Pacific will be in a position to dictate rates to the new road. But this objection has been shown to be somewhat fallacious, as San Diego would still have the Santa Fé; and would thereby have the choice of two roads, and be able to make better bargains than now at the same time, the development in the Salt River Valley is such that an ever wand west road through it, reachhave the choice of the choice of able to make better bargains than now. At the same time, the development in the Salt River Veilley is such that an elast and west road through it, reaching to Yuma, is a question of a very short time. In fact, the Globe Railroad is pointing in that direction now.

Sanguine San Diego people express the belief that the newly-planned moves ultimately result in securing a through eastern outlet, either through a combination of local roads, or by connecting with the Rock Island road in its extended lines reaching down from Kansas into New Mexico and Arizona.

A LENTEN ORATORIO.

A chorus of forty-three voices rendered "The Crucifixion" last evening at St. Paul's Episcopal Church to a large audience. The principal soloists were Misses Vyne Bowers and Caroline Polhamus, sopranos; Walter Buchanan, tenor; W. S. Young and Frank Collier, baritones, and E. M. Baroer, bass. The rendition was very good.

Miss Vyne Bowers sang very effectively the solo, "King Ever Glorious," and Miss Polhamus, in the opening recitatives, appeared to advantage. "The Agony" was given by Mr. Young with much clearness and feeling. "So Thou Liftest Thy Divine Petition," by Messrs. Young and Buchanan, was the most effective duet. A quartette by E. M. Barber, Carl Lamb, Frank Collier and Walter Buchanan was also especially good, and "The Processional to Calvary" was impressively sung.

FULL APPROVAL OF THE WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENTS.

No Interference With the National Guard Lies in the Creation of This Enormous Reserve

Formal organization of the greatest volunteer force in the world took place in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York, March 25, when the "Grand Army of Individual Americans" sprang into existence. North, South, East and West have joined hands in a vast patriotic league which has a Union veteran for ommander and a Confederate soldier for vice-commander.

Quiet preparations have been in progress for some weeks loking to the or-ganization of this volunteer force, which, if completed on the lines laid down, is expected by its promoters to be the largest assembly of volunteers the world has ever known having alegiance to one flag.

The preliminary steps toward organ-zation were taken on the evening of March 25, when distinguished veter ans and others interested, gathered a of Col. W. D. Washington, Gen. O. O. Howard was called to the chair and serve" was formally organized.

The plan and scope of the movement which was termed a "Grand Army of Individual Americans." was explained by Col. Washington. It was proposed that this new national reserve shall consist of volunteers who shall sign enlistment blanks, agreeing, in case of a foreign war or invasion, to take up arms at the call of the President of the United States, or the Governor of the State or Territory in which they reside. It is the hope of the founders of the National Volunteer Reserve that from two to five million patriotic citizens will be ready to form a part of this body, ready at all times to defend the flag.

Officers were elected as follows Lieut.-Gen. John M. Schofield, U.S.A nander; Lieut.-Gen. James Long-t. C.S.A., vice-commander. Gen. O. street, C.S.A., vice-commander. Gen. O.

O. Howard was elected chairman of the Military Committee, with vicechairmen as follows: Maj.-Gen. Adelbert Ames, Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Wheelcock, Maj.-Gen. Granville M. Dodge.
Col. W. D. Washington was elected

The Executive Committee of the Military Committee consists of Gen. John M. Schofield, Gen. James Longstreet, Gen. O. O. Howard, Gen. Adelbert Ames, Gen. G. M. Dodge, Gen. Joseph Wheelock, Gen. A. McD. McCook, Gen. T. Woods, Gen. T. F. Pierson, Gen. L. E. Molineaux, Gen. T. McMahon and President W. D. Washington.

As a preliminary to this important meeting, letters had been sent all over the United States by order of the Executive Committee, calling the attention of the press and people to the great plan outlined by some of the most distinguished veterans of the nation. As far as can be ascertained, the response has been ready and hearty from those who have at heart the country's welfare, and all seems ripe for the success of the movement. It has the full approval of the President and of the War and Navy Departments, where there is a keen realization of the importance just at this juncture of such a tremendous and unmistakable expression of confidence and loyalty to the

there is a keen realization of the importance just at this juncture of such a tremendous and unmistakable expression of confidence and loyality to the nation on the part of the people, an expression which will have a greater moral effect both at home and abroad than the purchase of half a dozen battleships or the expenditure of millions for national defense.

The plan and scope of the National Volunteer Reserve was given in an address by Col. W. d'H. Washington before the American Institute of Civics. In commenting upon its feasibility Col. Washington said: "It has long been a question whether a reserve force, or rather a reserve body of men to take up arms at a moment's notice without conscription of draft, could not be organized and maintained in connection with our present force and without the tedium and irksomeness of military duty, and without entailing upon the government or the State the burdensome expense of arming, equiping and maintaining such a large body of troops and without drawing from their vocations or pursuits the young men of the nation. This has been expressly accentuated by no less than three recent international compilications, which have threatened our interests by a rupture with other powers. We have lately been asking each other and the press, and our statesmen have been discussing the military strength of our country from the point of view of the insignificance of our nominal standing army and organized militar as compared with the great military establishments of other nations, and this to the great detriment of our present methods, which place us in a most unfavorable position with reference to other countries.

"The government of the United States and its representatives in Congress assembled have seen and met the exigencies of the hour by wisely and patriotically appropriating $50,000.000 for our national defenses, and it seems fitting and appropriating $50,000.000 for our national defenses, and it seems fitting and appropriating $50,000.000 for our national defenses, and it seems Weshould be provided the many which our tremendous population, our wealth, and enterprise, we should undoubtedly have more of an establishment from a military standpoint than our present nominal force, as nations far inferior in population maintain standing armies which entirely overshadow ours, and many who have not personally visited our shores are inclined to judge our position as a nation by a numerical comparison of our naval and military strength with their own. If this be true, we do ourselves a grave injustice. Such a comparison not only harms our trade, but inclines to the detriment of our commercial comparison of our naval and military strength with their own. and material welfare of our country, it should be our duty to protect and foster in every possible manner.

"The deficiency above described can be overcome by the organization of a body to be known as 'the National Volunteer Reserve.' The purpose of this organization is to enroll men of proper age and of physical qualifications to bear arms, who sign an enlistment blank, agreeing, in case of foreign war or invasion, to take up arms at the call of the President of the United States or of the Governor of the States or Territory in which they reside. There would be a central headquarters, which would practically be a clearing-house for recruits and enlistments. The original rolls would be transmitted directly to the War or Navy Department, there to be tabulated and included in the recognized summary of the military and naval forces of the United States.

"It is the writer's belief that from two to five millions of loyal, patriotic citizens will be found ready to form a part of this volunteer reserve. Nowhere else on earth could such a thing be accomplished. In Europe, the army, as a rule, is so hated that there are no volunteers, and for a country like our own to constantly keep enrolled 2,000,000 or more men, willing and ready to serve their country, for their country's sake, would be another wreath on the brow of our republic, and a lesson to the nations of the earth in the loyalty of our people. It would also be a warning to the world which would insure us freedom from disturbance by ready insuit or imposition, and thus secure us a continued and uninterrupted enjoyment of our justly earned prosperity. It is an acknowledged fact that the army enabled to go into battle with the largest reserve, all other things being equal, has the advantage, and upon the numerical strength of its reserve depends its endurance in conflict.

"It is not the object or intention of this organization to interfere in any way with the existing State militia, nor with the earnery of the names enrolled in any State could be handed to its equipment of forces raised in an emergency.

"No detriment could come to the National Guard of any State through this organization, for most of the States have fixed a maximum limit for their troops. This has already been reached in many cases, and consequently the nation cannot expect a further increase of its active army, of put an additional burden upon the States, many of which are supporting their guard in such numbers that the expense for armament, equipment and maintenance of this branch of the service is already burdensome. In some sections where interest is lacking, the National Volunteer Reserve would encourage enlistment, and act as a feeder to the ranks of the militia.
"Such an organization would inculcate earnest patriotism and military spirit in the youth of our land, many of whom today too lightly regard their citizenship and responsibility to their citizenship and responsibility to their country. It would also weld and draw together the indivdual and the nation and bring a realization of personal re-sponsibility to every man as an integral part of his country, and the minute men of 1776, loyal-hearted and sturdy. ready and brave, will have found a counterpart in the National Volunteer Reserve."

"The initial step in creating the organization will be the formation of a military committee of 100 veteran general officers of the army and pavy; to give the National Volunteer Reserve proper standing and indorsement be-fore the country as a practical, patriotic and desirable branch of the military establishment. "The permanent org

LOS ANGELES COMPANY. Veterans and Young Men Ready for

If doubt existed in the mind of any one as to the patriotism of the people of Los Angeles in the impending rupture with Spain, it would have been dispelled by attending the meeting las night at the Fraternal Brotherhood Hall, No. 1251/2 South Spring street, called for the purpose of organizing company ready to take up arms in de fense of the country in connection with the National Volunteer Reserve. Owing to a misunderstanding that only was veterans were to be admitted into the company, the meeting was not so large as it otherwise would have been, bu as it was there were few vacant chairs The call was issued by Gen. John stone Jones, an ex-Confederate soldier Veterans of both armies in the recent No time was lost in electing Gen. Edward Bouton formerly a Federa offieer, president pro tem. of the meet ing and A. M. Fulkerson, a Confederate veteran, secretary. Gen. Johnston Jones then addressed a few remarks t pose of the organization was to bring together for business the veterans of the two armies that had once taken u

Ariosto McCrimmon then offered the following resolution, whadopted with loud applause:

"Resolved, that the ex-soldiers as-sembled at this meeting take this occasion to express our unbounded confi-dence in the lofty patriotism and of the United States in dealing the difficult questions that have resented in connection with our rela-ons with Spain. While commending tions with Spain. While commending his efforts to secure an amelioration of the condition of Cuba by peaceful means, we have ever had a biding faith in his determination to maintain the bonor and dignity of the government under all circumstances."

A resolution offered by G. S. Bartholomew favoring the independence of Cuba was unanimously adopted.

Col. H. G. Otis, on request from the chair, read the substance of the plan of organization which he had received from New York.

A resolution was then adopted that and f.3900 fine imposed on Emile Zola, for New York.

A resolution was then adopted that the president should appoint an enrollment committee of seven to composed of two Union veterans, two Confederate veterans and three sons of veterans. The committee, which was an anounced later, was composed of S. R. Thorpe, G. N. Nolan, Capt. W. C. Robster, G. N. Nolan, Capt. W. C. Robster, S. The Laycock, Will A. Harris, son of a Confederate officer, took the rostrum. He said, in part: "Never before have I felt so completely at home in the company of Union veterans as I do now when we may have an opportunity to show that we love the Stars and Stripes as sincerely as does any patriot of the North. This is the first time that the veterans of the two great armies have been brought together for the sort of business that confronts us now, but once having come together for such a purpose, let the devil and the Spaniards stand the

we never were before. But even if there is a war with Spain it won't be much of a fight after all. Why. Texas alone could raise an army that would vanquish Spain."

The speaker sat down amid loud applause. He was followed by Cot. H. G. Otis, who responded to a request from the chairman for a speech. Col. Otis said that he despecated war, but that if a conflict became unavoidable he stood ready to do all he could for ris country. In part, he said: "Poorty fitted as the veterans are for active service in war, we can do something for the republic. We can do much by our example. If a conflict comes there will be such an uprising of two armies in this country as the world never saw. You may be sure our country is safe in such hands."

Rev. E. O. McIntyre was also called. He said he was not disposed to make a speech, because he was too hot. He then said: "The demands upon this country at the present time are of the greatest importance. I was too young to get in on the first war, but I want to get in on the first war, but I want to get in on the ground floor in the anticipated conflict with Spain. Those who are too old to go need not fear but there will be plenty for them to do. We need men to stay at home and take care of the stuff while the young ones go to the front."

Frank Dominguez, a Spanish-American, responded to a call for a speech. He said that while his ancestors were Spanish he preferred America and American principles for himself. "In case of a war with Spain none will be more ready to go to the defense of the American flag than the Spanish' Americans," said the speaker, with enthusiasm. "Just now we have been having a little war right here in Los Angeles among ourselves. But it is about ainety-nine out of a hundred of our people against a Spanish editor who has dared to voice un-American sentiments. As soon as the columns of the Los Angeles Times were opened to us we hastened to refute his statements."

Gen. H. A. Pierce counseled cod

Gen. H. A. Pierce counseled cool action in the impending crisis with Spain. He said: "Let us repose our confidence in President McKinley. If it he was a conflict in the conflict is inevitable. to the front if a war is They say that war is ur door. If it is, there veteran to go to the front if a conflict is inevitable. They say that war is knocking at our door. If it is, there can be no doubt what the response will be. But a war with Spain would not be of great consequence. For the last 200 years Spain has fought nearly all the little republics in the world, and has never yet found one small enough to whip."

Judge B. N. Smith was the last speaker of the evening. He said in part: "In this present flurry which is passing over the country, for I do not believe there will really be a war, the principle of humanity is the great incentive that prompts the people to act. We all love liberty. The struggle in Cuba is a repetition of the battle that has been going on between oppression and liberty for thousands of years. If this nation of ours does not stand for liberty, it is a misnomer.

"It is impossible that Americans should not sympathize with the struggling patriots in Cuba. The word of our great Executive has now gone forth that Cuba must be free. We may have a little scrap as a result, but I that Cuba must be free. We may have a little scrap as a result, but I doubt it. If, however, it is necessary to secure the freedom of Cuba, it must to secure the freedom to come.

"If it should become necessary for America to stand against the world we would do it, but I do not believe that such a thing will be necessary. I believe that the hearts of the liberty-loving people of Germany and Great Britain are with us. I think if it dess come to war, it will be a grand privillege for every American patriot to strike a blow for the freedom of Cuba." "This is a great country of 80,000,000

There is not a foreign power that There is not a foreign power that can raise half the force we can. But there is one thing that I am sorry for; that is, that if it really comes to war we can't scrap it out on the land so that our young men can show the stuff they are made of."

Eastern tourists and traveling men who have viewed the store all unite in saying it is one of the most attractive, if not the finest, store of its kind they have ever seen. Messrs, Isaacs Brothers certainly deserve great credit for their progressive methods. They are firm believers in printers' ink, and their store is doubtless a great addition to the Broadway shopping district.

A large number of witnesses for the defense in the Arthur trial testified yesterday that they believe Arthur was insane when he killed Mrs. Ransom. Two of Arthur's daughters were on the stand, and the testimony of the other one will be taken Monday morning, when Judge Smith and the fury will adjourn to the Broadway Hotel, where she is confined to her bed by illness. VIRGINIA COMPANY MAKES A LOW BID FOR CITY BUSINESS.

nother Cut Expected from Other Companies-Engineers' Demands Too High-More Quarterly States

engaged the attention of the Finance Committee of the City Council at its regular meeting yesterday. Perhaps the most important was the submission of a bid for all the insurance which the city is about to let, at a figure below what had been expected. This bid was from the Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company of Richmond, Va, represented here by the National Real Estate and Commercial Exchange. This company wants the entire insurance of the city and is willing to take it at the rate of 75 cents per $100. This is 5 cents below what had been prev-A Pretty Display on Broadway Yesterday.

The window displays of the establishment were very dainty and attractive, large crowds of people viewing the show all day. The interior of the store is quaintly arranged on quite different

The petition from the Wilshire Ostrich Farm Company for the repeal of the ordinance requiring such places to pay a monthly license of $25 will not be granted. It is this ordinance which provides for the collection of licenses from transient circuses and other shows, and it is the means of securing considerable revenue to the city. The Finance committee thought that the repeal of the ordinance would result in too much committee thought that the repeal of the ordinance would result in too much loss to the city, and therefore recommended that the petition be denied.

The request of the Beard of Park Commissioners for 'permission to advertise for bids for the privilege of establishing an animal exhibit and small observatory for two years on Mt. Mc-Kinley in Elysian Park, were granted and the proposals will be received within two weeks.

The dog-catcher and pound-keeper presented demands for $250 each representing the capture of 590 dogs. The claims were approved. The street-lighting bill amounting to $4144 for the past month, was also approved.

Consulting Engineers' Chims Too High For the Finance Committee,

High For the Finance Committee.

There is a prospect of a contest in the Council over the approval of the demands of the four consulting engineers who appeared in the city's interest in the recent water litigation. At the time these engineers were appointed the understanding was that they were to be paid a fee of $250 and $25 per day for each day they were actually in attendance at court during the trial of the case just concluded. When the demands were presented each of them was for $825. An examination of the claims shows that the engineers have made a claim for thirty-three days at the $25 rate, only twenty-two of which were spent in court. The other time was put in in examining the river, making measurements, etc.

When the demands came up before the Finance Committee of the City Council yesterday the consideration of

"Drs. Shores Perfectly Cured Me."

Mrs. Etta Robinson, 973 McGarry street, city, says: "I have been sick nearly all my life, but have been VERY sick since a short time before Christmas. I have had heart trouble, and after walking or riding on a bicycle for a short distance I could not breathe, my heart palpitated so. I could not lie on my left side at night without smothering and suffering great pain. I was al-, so badly troubled with catarrh of the head and throat? nose running, throat inflamed, and suffered greatly from indigestion. After eating I felt like dying. I would bloat up and my food soured in my stomach and did me no good. I began treating with Drs. Shores January 19, and as a result of their skill can now say I am perfectly well. I have absolutely and entirely recovered my health, and never felt better in my life, and I am glad to gratefully make public my experience in order to benefit others. cannot say too much in praise of Drs. Shores' treatment."

CORRECT DIAGNOSIS.

Catarrh may exist anywhere that you find a mucous membrane or ng. It may begin in the head, extend to the ears, the throat, the lining. It may begin in the head, extend to the ears, the throat lungs, the bronchial tubes, the stomach and other parts of the body, and lungs, the bronchial tubes, the stomach and other parts of the body, and every case must be treated differently. In some cases the difference may be slight, while it is great in others, but in all cases this difference of treatment is all-important, in fact, the keystone of success.

Drs. Shores carefully diagnose each case—they find the starting point, and then trace the ravages of the disease to its extent—finding out every portion affected—and then proceed to treat the affected parts carefully and scientifically, so when a cure is made the whole disease is

IFROM A SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.]
It seems to me that this time of great interest in the controversy over the Cuban and Maine troubles is an epportune moment for considering the strong admiration entertained by certain well-known American writers for the Spanish character, not only of the present, but reaching back to the period of the conquest of America. American to a specifical readers have been struck with the beatific mature of the Spanish character, and which is in such striking contrast with the characters of the same map as portrayed by other and Americans as frying end Prescott, we find what must impress the readers as a halo of fiction wrapped about all facts.

Divested, as far as possible, of the glamer of romance, it appears that the petry kingdoms which now comprise Spain were from earliest days the scene of continuous robbery and assassination. Such was the condition of the country when the Moors took to Spain the first conception of civilization. During the Moors took to Spain the first conception of civilization. During the continuous robbery and assassination. Such was the condition of the Moors in Spain, up to their banishment in the fifteenth century, the carnival of crime centinued. The chronicles of The Cid, which set forth the character of the people of early Spain, and which were designed to praise the people, portray them as a blood-thristy race.

The days of American conquestor in the first days of American conquestors. Now the fact seems to be that we must divide the conquerors into two groups. It is undoubtedly true that in that day of religious enthusiasm there were many devout priests, who, haying forsaken the world, came to America for the sole purpose of civating savage mankind. But the opportunities which were then presented called forth a vasily larger body of men who sought only gain and adventure. They cared not for good works, and sought with their swords and batharcus gunpowder the overthrow of native governments and ribes that they might rob the aborigines. The repeated butcheries of Aztecs by Certez the repeated duplicity of Pizaro in dealing with Peruvians, had but one great object, robbery, and no herror of shedding of innocent blood was sufficient to stand in the way of the attainment of their object.

Now the evidence seems conclusive that the Spanish governments and ribes that they might rob the aborigines. The repeated butcheries of Aztecs by Certez the repeated butcheries of Aztecs by Certez the repeated butcheries of the attainment of their object.

which there was no hope of recovery.

Following the conquest came the period of colonization and nation building. If we were to stop to contrast the earliest history of the Spandards down to the present there has been so much of romance in their governmental as well as social and individual affairs that it is difficult to arrive at a comprehension of the true character of the strange people, and wherever we turn in literature, whether it be in the writings of their own auchers or in those of such well-known Americans as Irving and Prescott, we find what must impress the readers as a halo of fiction wrapped about all colenies which she heeded.

Spain, however, has gathered no lessons from her whole career. One after another her colonies have broken their bonds, and in every one of her colonies there has been revolution following revolution, and only in every recent years has Spanish-American civilization passed from the condition of anarchy.

But Spain is today making the same demads upon Cuba that she has made successively upon all her colonies, though that alone remains of her American possessions.

treachery. But now they are told of the scenes of starvation in Cuba. They are not animated by greed, nor by re-venge, nor by ties of blood. To a man venge, nor by ties of blood. To a man the American people are aroused and are demanding the cessation of the berbarity of the Spaniard, basing their claim on nothing less than humanity. I believe that there is a difference between a race who would condemn a half million innocent people to starvetion, though of their own blood, and another disinterested people who would go to war. If necessary, to save the world from such inhumanity E. F. HOWE.

THE PALMIST'S REWARD.

Years and years ago, in a certain country, a certain Queen reigned su-breme. All the world has heard of her, out she shall be nameless. She was a old, haughty, imperious woman, ruling absolutely. The country prospered dur ing her reign, but, although the people acknowledged her power, she was held in great awe. After all, she was but

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] LONDON, April 2.-[By Atlantic Cable. Associated Press Copyright, 1898.) The crisis between Spain and the United States is hard pushed for first place in public interest here by the question as to whether or not the Marquis of Salisbury will retire from office, and the consequent reorganization of the Cabinet. The Conservative newspapers, haviticularly in the provinces, are in open revolt. The National Review sums up the bitter denunciations the bitter denunciations by quoting the late Gen. Gordon's saying: "The British race is a race of lions led by asses."

The discontent is so widespread that the idea is rapidly gaining that a crisis in the history of the Unionist party will soon be reached. The consensus of opinion inclines to the belief that the Marquis of Sallsbury, yielding to the advice of his friends, will retire from the Foreign Office, but will remain Pre-

The enemies of Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, are ditigently circulating the report that he aspires to succeed the Marquis of Salisbury, which is farthest from his thoughts at present, Mr. Chamberlain knowing that his Liberal-Unionist friends would desert him if he tried for the Foreign Office.

Political club circles consider that, as the Duke of Devonshire is assured the Premiership, if the Marquis of Salisbury retires altogether, A. J. Balfour, the First Lord of the Treasury, and Acting Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and government leader in the House of Commons, will succeed his uncle in the Foreign Office. During the debate in the House of Commons on the British prison system, John Redmond, the Parnellite leader, advocating more humane treatment, especially to political offenders, gave an elaborate and eulogistic account of the prison system of the Uinted States, showing by comparison the "English system is the most brutal and brutalizing in the world."

"PIANO POLISH."

A Small Flask Secures Custom for

Tinno Man.

[Kansas City Times:] A Kansas City man who sell pianos takes frequent trips into Kansas. Not long ago be heard of a man who wanted a piano out in a little town in Marion county. The town was off the line of the railroad, and he would have to drive ten miles from the railroad to see his prospective customer. The town on the railroad is not a large place, but it is exceedingly interesting. The piano man had been there once before, and knew a young man who lived in the town, who, however, did not know the nature of his business. He had learned that the man in the other town was away, and would not be home for two days, so he determined to pass them in the railroad town.

He was looking out the hotel window when he saw on the opposite side of the street the man he knew. He rushed out and called on the native, for he was getting tired of himself. After the usual greetings the piano man said, with the peculiar nods and winks in Kansas:

"Can't we get a drop of beer around winks in Kansas: "Can't we get a drop of beer around can't we get a drop of beer around here somewhere?"

"Not a smell in town," answered the native. "You can get some stuff at the drug store they call whisky, but it would burn a hole in a boot."
"Never mind; I've got a little good stuff in my grip. Come up to the hotel and bave a drink," said the piano man.

tel and have a drink, "said the plano man.

"All right," answered the native. "Hello, there's my dad over there. I'd like to have you meet him."

"Sure," said the plano man, "bring him over. I'll be in the office."

The plano man had brought along with him a pint of good whisky for medicinal purposes—only for coughs and colds and that sort of thing. In a few minutes his friend entered, followed by six native whiskers, eager eyes and drooping mouths. The plano man could see the ignominious disappearance of his pint of whisky in the crowd.

For some time he hesitated, hoping they would grow tired and go away, but they all sat around the stove and talked politics until the plano man, seeing that they would stay until the next morning if nothing happened, said, in as hospitable a tone as the circumstances would permit: "Gentlemen I have a small bottle of fine whisky here. Won't you join me in a drink?" I have a small bottle of fine whisky here. Won't you join me in a drink?" The men all looked around fearfully, with their fingers on their lips, and said; "Hus-s-sh!" like a comic-opera chorus. Then the oldest man arose and tiptoed out of the room, the others following. They filed along a hall and stopped in the dining-room before a water-cooler.

The piano man produced his pint of liquor and gravely handed it to the old man, who took a "snorter?" The bottlewas handed down the line. A door creaked in the back part of the room. The piano man looked around, and framed in the square place in the door was the face of the landlady of the hottel.

'It's all right, madam," said the piano "It's all right, madam," said the planoman; "I'm only showing a few samples." The face disappeared. When the bottle got back to the plano man there wasn't enough liquor in it to make his eye smart.

The next day he met each one of his guests of the bottle, and each called bim to one side and whispered confidentially:

"I hear you sell mighty good stuff.

mean?"
"Tha'sall right! Tha'sall right!" said the blacksmith. "I ain't sayin' nothing. Just ship me a gallon by express." And he winked significantly. Wherever the plano man went he was taken to one side and given an order for any quantity of whisky, from a gallon to a keg.

When he went to the livery stable to engage a team to take him to the other town the liveryman winked and said:

other town the liveryman winked and said:

"Better wait until this afternoon. The man you want is not in this morning."

"I don't want any special man. Any old man will do," answered the other. "No, the man that knows all the places is out," explained the liveryman. So, rather "than argue and explain he walted until the afternoon.

Just before he left he stepped up to the hotel desk to pay his bill.

"The landlady wants to see you before you go," said the clerk. And he went in search of her. Presently the door opened and the landlady came in, carefully locking the door behind her. There were two other doors, and these she carefully examined, looking out for eavesdroppers, then locked. The plano man was becoming alarmed. He thought of the Benders and other horrible, things.

The landlady came close up to him.

thought of the Benders and other horrible things.

The landlady came close up to him with an awful and mysterious light in her eyes, and, leaning over, whispered in his ear:

"I sometimes handle your goods. Let the bill go. Send me five gallons right away by express."

"What!" exclaimed the piano man, "Five gallons of what? Plano polish?"

"Is that what you call it now?" she said, with a knowing wink. "You gave my old man u drink the other day. He says it was the finest he ever swallowed. I can use about five gallons of that sort of piano polish about twice a month."

"Great heavens, woman!" said the "Great heavens, woman!" said the man, "let me pay my bill and go. I sell pianos; I don't sell whisky."

If there is a moral in this at all it is: Don't give a Kansas man a drink out of a bottle unless you are certain that he knows your business. You may get the reputation of having it to sell.

In the middle of the room, in its white coffin, lay the dead child, a nephew of the poet. Near it, in a great chair, sat Walt Whitman, surrounded by little ones, and ho ding a beautiful little girl on his lap. The child looked curiously at the spectacle of death, and then inquiringly into the old man's face. "You don't know what it is, do you, my dear?" said he, adding, "We don't, either."

We know not what it is, dear this sleep we know not what it is, dear this sleep so deep and still;
The folded hands, the awful calm, the check so pale and chill;
The lids that will not lift again, though we may call and call;
The strange, white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this desolate heart-pain;
This dread to take our daily way, and walk in it again;
We know not to what other sphere the loved who leave us go,
Nor why we're left to wonder still; nor why we do not know.

But this we know: Our loved and dead, if they should come this day— Should come and ask us. "What is life?" not one of us could say. Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be; Yet oh, how sweet it is to us, this life we live and see.

Then might they say—these vanquished ones and blessed is the thought!
"So death is sweet to us, beloved! though we may tell ye naught;
We may not tell it to the quick—this mystery of death—the would, the mystery of death—the would the mystery of death—the would, the mystery of death—the would the mystery of the world the w Ye may not teil us. if ye would, the mys tery of breath."

told me that the President wanted Mr.
Proctor to hold off until he was ready to declare his policy, and was in fact under the impression that Mr. Proctor had promised not to make his statement public at that time. The administration has been getting ready-putting ships in commission, mounting guns, providing ammunition.
Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who has the coast defenses under his immediate charge, says we are ready now—that the enlistment of two regiments, which he has recommended to Congress for several years without success, gives us enough artillerymen to man our guns at, the twenty-two points on the coast where the guns and mortars have been mounted at a cost of $26,000,000. These points are: Portland Head, Portland,

"Have we enough men, with the additional regiments of artillery, to man all the guns at these places?" I asked of Gen. Miles.

"We have," he answered.

"And all of them are trained?"

"All of them except the enlisted men have had experience handling big guns."

"You said two years ago, general, that to man the coast defenses the two additional regiments which you then recommended would be ample. You also said that in an emergency only a few skilled men, who knew about the machinery and the working of it were meeded at every gun—say one skilled men in every five. In an emergency, men could be found in any laboring community and one skilled man culd easily take charge of a body of five or ton other men."

"It is true," said the general, "that unskilled men could be used for the heavy work around a gun—the moving of the ammunition from place to place, the heavy lifting and hauling, and so on. But the handling of a big gun requires the highest type of skilled labor. The loading of the gun, the finding of the range, the filling of the shells with gun-cotton—almost everything about the gun requires knowledge and experience. Every unskilled laborer that you used would weaken your defense so much. The more unskilled men ned by skilled men in time of war, then and keen the gun them and keen them and keen the gun them and keen the gun them and keen the gun them and keen them and keen the gun them and keen them and keen them and keen the gun them and keen them and kee

The possible enemy against which we have always been preparing a "perfect" defense is England. Senator Squire, when he was at the head of the Committee on Coast Defenses, urged "the immediate proximity of a great forcigin naval station on the island of Vancouver," as the necessity for establishing complete defenses at Puget Sound. "In case of war with England, we would have the enemy right at the door to Puget Sound," said Senator Squite.

"That is a well-demonstrated fact," said Gen. Miles. "The gun on shore is stationary. The ship is never still. It is moving constantly, and at the same time it rolls with the tide. That makes is more difficult to aim a gun on ship-board. Then the elevation of a gun on a ship is limited, which reduces its range below that of the coast defense gun. There is a difference, too, in the target. A ship 300 feet long and 60 wide is a much better mark than a gun in an emplacement."

"Are our guns better than those of any other country?"
"I am not prepared to say that they are."

"It has been said that they are bet-

"Are our guns better than those of any other country?"

"It am not prepared to say that they are."

"It has been said that they are better than those of England."

"Does England say so?" said the general; and he looked at me a minute without further comment, and then durned his eyes away and looked out of the window toward the White House.

Gen. Miles has said that all the old smoothbores along the coast are worthless except to sell for old iron. It has been said by others that they would be useful in time of war for protecting torpedo fields, and Gen. Miles has been bedieged lately by men with propositions to rifle and reinforce the old guns and make them available in time of war. Gen. Miles eays that these guns are mostly obsolete, mounted on old and rotten carriages, and as far as the guns are concerned, that they could not be sold for enough to pay the purchaser for taking them down and using them for old iron.

"I doubt," he says, "if they would make any impression whatever on the armor of ships, as men now fight behind from ten to fifteen inches of steel plate. If they were, I think that a few men mounted in the rigging of a ship of war using rapid-fire guns, such as the Maxim, which fires 600 shots a minute, or the Colt, which fires 400 shots a minute and are effective at two miles, or other quick-fire and effective guns, would keep the men away from them. Considering the fact that all battle-ships carry batteries of high-power guns and also batteries of rapid-fire guns, smooth-bore, short-range guns would be useless."

The most important feature of coast defense is the protection of great cities, Gen. Miles said to me:

"The reason for mounting guns as far as possible from a city, is to prevent an enemy's ship getting near enough to bombard the city and burn it. A hostile fleet cannot come within twenty-four miles of New York, without coming under the guns at Sandy Hook, now Fort Hancock. With the fortifications completed, a fleet could not enter Long Island Sound without encountering the land batteries

"Is New York in position today to keen an enemy at a safe distance?"

keen an enemy at a safe distance?"

"That I will not speak about," said Gen. Miles has always urged on Congress, that the land battery was the most effective means of defending our cities, and it is due largely to his efforts that New York, Boston, Philadelpia and Washington are protected today. Concerning these points which are not wholly protected by land batteries, he says that in an emergency vessels could be filled with rock and sunk in the channel of the harbor, as they did in the South. That would be very expensive. The engineer at Savannah only two years ago blew out some of the old hulks sunk thirty years ago at Savannah, Ga. It cost the Russian government many millions of dollars to ream ove the vessels sunk in the harbor at Sebastapol.

There are other means of protection in time of attack, Gen. Miles says. One is having a navy to protect each harbor; but that is most expensive, and in an emergency is limited by the number of ships you can buy. Great Britain, having a fleet at Halifax and

The grand reputation which Doctor Pierce has built up in the past thirty years as a regularly qualified practicing physician, inspires such universal confidence as few doctors enjoy. As chief consulting physician to the invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., he has had probably a wider and more practical experience in treating severe chronic diseases, than any other physician in America. His prescriptions are standard remedies all over the world. His "Favorite Prescription" for weak women is the only proprietary remedy for its purpose.

There are times when a man's health is at stake upon the care he gives to it within twenty-four hours. He may be up and on his feet, and going about his work, but his system has become run-down and weakened to that point, that a few hours are as critical as if he were at the turning point of a dangerous fever, but he doesn't realize it. It is the same way when a man's liver has been out of order so long, and his blood so choked up with billous poison that his lungs begin to be affected and he feels that he is going into consumption. This is the critical moment. He may not be in consumption at all at that time; but a few days or even hours may put him into it.

Another peculiar story comes from the other State penal institution, at Folsom, which is generally supposed to be under much more rigorous pervision than the penitentiary at San Quentin. At Folsom 'a counterfeitplant was actually discovered within the walls of the State prison. The work was done in the engine-room by two convicts. So far as known only nickels were coined, presumably because no precious metals could be obtained. The men were discovered in the act of manufacturing bogus coins by guards, who had been told what was going on. A large number of wellexecuted 5-cent pieces were found. They were made of Babbitt metal, taken from the engines which run in the prison grounds for the purpose of hauling rock from the quarries. The impression prevails among the officers that it was the purpose of the convicts to coin a great quantity of nickels and ship them out on freight cars, where their friends on the the construction of fortifications at outside could receive them in exchange | San Pedro, and the purchasing of guns. for opium. NO EUROPEAN INTERVENTION.

dispatches have contained frequent intimations of European mediation or intervention between the United States and Spain in the pending trouble. One dispatch went so far as to state with a considerable degree of positiveness that France would lend active assistance to Spain in the event of war. Another dispatch noted the fact that the Austrian Minister at Washington had informed the State Department that Austria-Hungary viewed grave concern" the attitude of the United States toward Spain. Other dispatches have hinted at German intervention, and at combined action on the part of the European powers to prevent the loss of Cuba to Spain.

All these rumors may be dismissed as improbable in the last degree. Not one of the European nations, nor any two, nor all of them combined, would venture to interfere in the Cuban question. Intervention by combined Europe would be impossible, because the combination necessary to harmonious action could not be secured. Intervention by any one or two nations of Europe is also out of the question, for three principal reasons; (1.) No nation or nations of Europe would care to incur the enmity of the United States, whose power they both fear and respect. (2.) No European nation has interests in Cuba or in Spain great enough to warrant so hazardous an experiment as intervention. (3.) England, as the good friend and kinsman of the United States, would not view with equanimity the interference of any other nation on earth in this affair, which is purely a misunderstanding between Spain and the United States. If any other nation should at tempt active intervention, she would be obliged to reckon with John Bull, as well as with Brother Jonathan There is no nation of Europe which would venture to try conclusions upon such terms. The idea of European intervention may, therefore, be dismissed as utterly chimerical. The conflict will be entirely between the United States and Spain. The result is not at all in doubt. The only real question is as to how long it will take us to trounce

A great fuss is being made in the East over Prince Albert of Belgium, especially among the young society ladies, whose heads have been almost turned at the presence of a real live prince. Prince Albert may be a very decent fellow, but if so he belies his family traits. His father, King Leopold, has an exceedingly shady reputation in Europe. He was prominently mixed up in the story of the whole sale debauchery of young girls in London, published in Stead's Pall Mall Gazette. He is known to eke out his ncome by the earnings of gambling institutions in Belgium. His oldest daughter, the Princess Louise of Saxe-Coburg, was recently reported en route to America, with her lover, an army officer, with whom her husband had fought a duel. Incidentally, it is mentioned that the Princess owed tradesmen over $20,000 when she ran cue the island from the clutch of a off. I do not mean to deery the Spaniards, and I have no prejudice against them be-cause they are not Americans, but I have studied carefully, and I cannot hold otherwise than that they are in ferior to our men in the qualities named.

The Democratic City Central Com-nittee met last evening for the purpose of filling vacancies caused by resig-nations and removals. The vacancies in each ward were filled by the delegation from the ward, and no contest arose until the Eighth Ward was called. Then Mc-Inerny rose and named Tim Horgan and E. didate for Councilman from the Elighth Ward, he naturally desired to name these new appointees on the City Central Committee.

But El Hutch, the Populist Councilman from the Elighth, does not propose to retire to private life if he can help it. As he cherishes the delusion that he can get Democratic support in his campaign, he has been alarmed by McInerny's candidacy and was on hand last evening to watch his competitor's movements. As a Populist, he had of course no voice in the proceedings, but he brought with him his henchman, Nick Quierola, who was armed with a proxy from one of the absent committeemen of the Elighth Ward.

As soon as McInerny named his two men as the choice of the Fighth Ward delegation, Quierola made a strenuous roar. He insisted that no vancancy existed in the Sixty-first Precinct, and that the precinct should in any case choose its committeeman. McInerny treated these objections with scorn.

"I how four proxies in me pocket," he said to the chairman, and the suggestion was enough. Creighton ruled Quierola out of order. Quierola was not to be squelched without a struggle and he again lifted up his voice in protest, but without avail. McInerny's men were accepted.

The remaining vacancies were filled without incident. A. M. Brags, the school director, was among the hew appointees from the Ninth.

Some routine business was then taken up, but the chairman's eagle cye suddenly detected several of the committeemen in the act of making a quiet sneak for the door. He hastily stopped the fugitives and announced that $10 must be raised to pay for the rent of the ball. This cast a chili upon the proceedings. The chairman said that a collection must be taken up, and he appointed Dan Neuhart and Martin Marsh to act as tellers. This did not meet with general approval. would not realize six bits. A votes suggested that Jim Heliman foot the bill, but a far-away look came over Jim's face, as he folded his hands unresponsively over his stomach. One of the inexperienced members suggested that each committeeman present pay 50 cents, but a chorus of amendments arose, and it was evident that the majority would not stand for more than two bits.

The chair very pertinently remarked that it would not be right to require even two bits from every member present, for no doubt some would not have so much money.

The situation appeared critical, but Martin Marsh saved the day. He moved that all members of the City Central Committee be required to pay two bits before the next meeting, and that all who should fail to pay be deprived of their membership in the comprived of their membership in the com-nittee.

Protests were prompt, numerous and Protests were prompt, numerous and loud, but the chair hastily declared the motion carried. As a concession, however, to the fears of some of the more vigorous kickers, the assurance was given that the new rule would not be too rigidly enforced, so that those who "had no money but a good excuse" might still retain their membership. There is, therefore, some reason to There is, therefore, some reason to hope that the Democratic City Central Committee will at 111 at 1

As soon as the financial crisis was past, a motion was adopted that a com-mittee be appointed to confer with repremittee be appointed to confer with repre-sentatives of the County Central Com-mittee, to arrange a plan of campaign. But there was one subject of vast importance that had not yet been con-sidered by the unterrified. E. St. Julien Cox arose to the occasion and offered

e following resolution:
'Whereas, the differences between the United States and the kingdom of Spain may result in war; and, whereas, the Pacific Coast of the former is but illy protected from foreign assault or nvasion, especially that part of the same at Santa Monica and San Pedro, and leaving the city of Los Angeles, the queen city of the south, open to destruction at the hands of a wellequipped foe, and property far into the nundreds of millions liable to destruc-tected from all danger from foreign attack.

"Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the Secretary of State of the United States."

As soon as he could assume a gravity suited to the imminence of the dangers alluded to in the resolutions, I. B. Dockweiler pointed out that in view of the disturbed relations existing between this country and Spain It would be inexpedient to call the attention of the enemy to these unprotected ports. He, therefore, moved that the resolutions be referred to a committee, and the country's safety was accordingly entrusted to I. B. Dockweiler, A. W. Fisher and M. W. Conkling.

The Frost Zones and the Safe Belts Fairly Described

a gentleman thoroughly posted on horticultural matters. This map goes to show that the first in all instances followed well-defined channels, due to the topography of the various sections: in fact, it proves conclusively that while the path made by the frost of the past winter was wider in some instances than those of previous years, due to air currents, it practically followed the same channels. This map shows that the heaviest burden of damage falls on the low lands of Riverside, where it can be said to be generally true that all fruit below Indiana avenue, including Magnolis and California avenues and the cross streets, is damaged to a greater or lesser degree. This territory includes a large body of old trees, mostity seedlings. The fruit on a portion of Colton Terrace is a complete loss. That of Moreno, Perris and Alessandro, and the San Jacinto plains and very little don, the foothills surrounding it. It also shows that there is no orange land on the San Jacinto plains and very little on the foothills surrounding it. It also shows that the following localities are practically reserved as a solutely frostless: The highlands of Riverside above Victoria avenue, including Arlington Heights, and all the extent of elevated ground which extend to, including East Riverside, Corona, Redlands. Highland, Colton, Rialto, Etiwanda, Qucamonga, Ontario, Pomona, Asuas, Lordsburg, San Dimas, Glendora, Covina, Duarte, Monrovia. It will be seen that it is of the utmost consequence that nothing should be permitted to interrupt these communications for an instant—Indeed, it is not well with an army when its communications are so much as threatened. And this is the reason why a given force of men cannot go straight to its objective point in time of war, but must first meet, fight and drive back an opposing army. If it attempted to go forward and leave the enemy to one side, though it were an inferior force in every way, it would still be able to interrupt the communications and the invader would have to consent to ignominous retreat or quick starvation.

Now, it is the desire to go somewhe'ze which always brings on a battle. The enemy must be defeated, it possible annihilated, before an advance can be made. The army operating on interior lines, the one nearest its supplies is usually able to select a place where it chooses to make a stand. Then its opponents must fight right there or, by so maneuvering as to get on its flank—which is another way of saying that its communications are threatened—force it to retreat. Eventually, there will come a point where other strategy is useless, the pickets come together, one set of treat. Eventually, there will come a point where other strategy is useless, the pickets come together, one set of them wil be driven back and, eventually, crowds of skirmishers are thrown out in their place.

It is these skirmishers who act as the feelers for the generals commanding. By means of them it is learned to a considerable extent just where the principal forces of the enemy are to a considerable extent just where the principal forces of the enemy are placed. Until that is ascertained the cavalry, artillery and reserves are ordered to the points where preliminary information—obtained by means of scouts and the like—indicates they are most likely to be useful. As soon, as the skirmishers have done their work the battle begins by ordering the various components of the army to the places where they are needed.

eral of his tales a matter of morale which has been little discussed. It which has been little discussed. It which has been known that Americans, by reason of their inventiveness and high intelligence, make dangerous enemies. It is also true that they must be officered by men in whom they have implicit confidence, or they may be defeated by vastly inferior forces. But Mr. Eggleston's observation goes further than this. He points out that the Confederates repeatedly permitted themselves to undergo a lack of rations that would have hurried a Eurouean army into abrupt retreat, simply because their hearts were in the struggle, their consciences and very souls, and they could not retreat—it would have been wicked. And as part of the same national characteristic, he repeatedly observed the northern soldiers fighting, not with that detachment which follows upon an attempt to solve a problem, but with the immediate personal interest which can mean but one thing—this is not a mere struggle between two opposing forces, but a fight in which I cannot afford to be whipped, because I am right; precisely the same feeling that makes a boy strong to avenge an insult passed upon his mother. "Thrice armed is he," as Shekespeare says, "who hath his quarrel just."

At that time he operated from Pasadena and Monrovia, and wrote east, representing himself to be the clerk of the board of school trustees, requesting the consignment of books to him to be paid for on arrival. Lazarus & Melzer, F. W. Jones and Parker, the Broadway bookseller, were all recipients of orders from Brooks, and some of the books were recovered later at second-hand stores where he had sold them, but finally, he was arrested on the charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses. He was fined $100, with the alternative of 100 days in jail, and served his sentence. Meantime the United States grand jury had returned an indictment against Brooks, allas, Tripp, and he was rearrested at the expiration of the 100-days' sentence, to answer in the Federal Court the charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes. On August 4 of last year he pleaded guilty to that charge and was sentenced to thirty days in jail.

At that time it developed that Brooks or Tripp, as he was known in Los Angeles, had been a school teacher for twenty years in Michigan and Wisconsin. where he held State certificates. He is a man of 45 years of age, and apparently prepossessed in favor of the book device by which he has made considerable money very easily. One lot of books sold by him in Seattle netted him $150. His recent capture was effected through Macmillan & Co. of Chicago, and their San Francisco agent comparing notes: It was discovered that to the Chicago house Brooks wrote over the name of Charles Lyon, and to the San Francisco house over that of John Wilson. This difference being detected, the matter was placed in the hands of Federal authorities, and Brooks's was arrested at Tacoma when he called for his mail.

Up north it is anticipated he will do as he did in Los Angeles—plead guilty and face the music. At present he spends his time in jail studying the Bible.

They are sufficiently omniscient as it is. But the chiefs in the War Department may. It is a pleasure and a duty to signal it to them. Charles Windsor is another gentleman who deserves attention. He. also, is an inventor. He has discovered and patented a device wherewith bicycle tires become self-inflating. The rider has but to turn a screw, hop on, ride away; the action of the wheel does the rest. Mr. Szczepanik is an Austrian subject. Mr. Windsor is an Englishman. The invention of the first may add new terrors to private life, but the invention of the second will render escape delightfully expeditious.

MARION CRAWFORD TELLS ABOUT THE MIDDLE AGES.

Much of Romantic Tragedy, of Bois-terous Living and Rude Manners That Formed a Prelude to Lat-

Again a large and appreciative audience gathered in Simpson Tabernacle last evening to hear the second and last lecture delivered by F. Marion Craw-ford, wherein he described Italian home life in the middle ages. The Roman Empire had been overturned, and chaos reigned. "You must imagine Rome as a wilderness," said Mr. Crawford, "as different from what it is now, and what it was in the earlier days of the great Roman Empire, as anything you can think of. The population of Rome at Roman Empire, as anything you can think of. The population of Rome at think of. The population of Rome at the flance to the law. The women did most of the cooking, and the dishes a having been from 3,000,000 to 6,000,000 people. When Ricuzi, the Tribune, was born in 1313, it had fallen to about thirty thousand persons, men, women and children. That remnant of a vast population was herded together in the little part of the city by the river. The reason why they congregated there was no more water left.

"When the population moved down to the river the great remnants left behind were seized by the more powerful of the people, and the foundations laid for the powerful familles, some of which remain today. The Orsim family established themselves by getting pos-

Windsor."

Mr. Crawford described the interior of one of these old fortress-palaces, and in noting the innumerable portraits that may today, even, be found in some of them, accounted for their presence in rather curious fashion. In the middle ages, after visiting one of the barons, instead of sending a message of thanks, a portrait would be sent, and as a consequence portraits came to be painted by the square foot, and always of the same size. One and always of the same size. One palace today contains 600 of these portraits.

In those severe times, too, the men and women were kept separated as severely as in a Turkish harem, and this measure was under the circumstances in no sense despotic. The women were of respectable parentage, brought from the country estate of the baron or lord, and in due time married in their own station. The men retainers, however, were cutthroats, murderers, many under sentence of death, and their only hope was to find a refuge with a noble powerful enough to protect them, and bid de-away from the time-honored custom.

The tragic history of Bracciano, the seat of the Orsini family, mentioned by Sir Walter Scott as being beautiful beyond all that Rome contained, was sold at length, and naturally led up to election of Sixtut V to the pontificate. He was the Pope that began life as a swine herd, but who immediately after assuming the reins of power, proceeded to put down the brigandage, disorder and general license that prevailed. He it was that destroyed the middle ages.

of the people, and the foundations laid for the powerful milles, some of which remain today. The Orsim family established themselves by getting possession of the theater of Pompey, where they built a great castle, but the earliest record we have of any ancient monument being held by one person is early in the tenth century, when the mausoleum of Hadrian was held by a woman. She made and unmade Popes, and placed her relatives in the pontifical chair, and dying, left her power and possessions to an only daughter. The name of the woman was Theodora, but her history is enveloped in mystery. As to her father and mother, even her husband, nothing is known. The daughter married the Duke of Tuscalum and she was the ancestress of the powerful Colonna family. Those who were unable to selze monuments built castles, each distinguished by square black towers, and we are told that at one time there were 400 of these towers rearing alort their somber height.

"The patriarchal system played such a large part in the life of the Middle Ages that its origin is very ancient, dating back probably to before the time of Romulus. The law then allowed a father to hold, buy and even execute any member of the family, and all the descendents resulting from the marriages of the children were subservient to the head of the house. This system was abolished in the thid century, but in modified form it survived and by tradition has lived to our own time. The married sons lived under the same roof with the parents, and sometimes five or six families would be under the absolute domination of the head of the house. This accounts for the enormous size of some of the palaces. There is a palace today in which loop people are living, not not living the apartments set spart for the Prince and Princess, which are

RUSH OF GOLD-SEEKERS OVER CHILCOOT PASS,

Merchandise Piled All Along the Trail-Reports of New Finds Exaggerated-Little Sickness in

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.] DYEA (Alaska,) March 21.—Here, at the headwaters of the Lynn Canal, since the first of October, there has sprung up as if by magic a city of some four thousand people—hotels by the score, lcdging-houses and restaurants numbered by hundreds, and business houses of every description, running into the fifty mark, and stocks that would compare favorably with some of our leading grocery houses in did Los Angeles. People are surprised landing every day nearly a thousand people, on an average, and five hun-dred to a thousand tons of outfits. People with sleds and dog teams, elk, goats, burros, mules, horses and oxen, are rushing madly on, bent on getting over the pass before the coming thousands shall arrive and block the trail, And from here to the summit one sees only great piles of merchandise every few rods for the whole eighteen miles of the trail. Meeting a stream of huof the trail. Meeting a stream of humanity plodding along with loaded sleighs, drawn by weary men and women, snarling, worthless dogs, lazy crazy, goats, slow-plodding oxen and mules and the more serviceable horses, till one is fairly astounded at the rush over the Chilcoot Pass. If the present influx continues, fully fifty or possibly seventy-five thousand will cross the summit this season. The trail is in fine condition; further improvements to it are being inaugurated, so that few of the terrors of last season will few of the terrors of last season will be met with this season. The writer took D. H. Davis and wife and 6500 pounds to Sheep Camp yesterday. Mr. Davis is one of the old-time merchants on Washington street, Los Angeles, and though nearing the three-score and-ten mark, he takes a large outfit into the interior, together with a couple of men, whom he has staked for the form, whom he has staked for the couple of men, who men the couple of men the Davis is one of the old-time merchants on Washington street, Los Angeles, and though nearing the three-score-and-ten mark, he takes a large outfit into the interior, together with a couple of men, whom he has staked for the journey. Reports are constantly coming out his time of life.

Reports are constantly coming out of new finds on the Henderson and Stewart rivers, and a party out yesterday from Dawson tell of tons of gold ready for shipment in the spring; but all these stories grow as they travel, and one should think twice before leaving a comfortable home in the fair Southland to risk the perils of such a trip.

fair Southland to risk the perils of such a trip.

In my next I will tell you more of Dyea and its possible future, for it is the key to great, and yet unexplored, country—the base of supplies for the interior—and the next few imonths will make it possible to land freight in Dawson in from seven to ten days through the summer months.

The reports of sickness and deaths

have been greatly exaggerated, and while cerebro-spinal meningitis has prevailed to a considerable extent at Skaguay and here, in this place there skagnay and here, in this place there have been comparatively few deaths. Dr. Reyber reports only one death out of seventeen cases he has treated. I write this to allay any anxiety among those who have friends here, and have read the press reports that have gone out of scores and hundreds of deaths from this disease. C. E. PACKARD.

QUESTION OF COAST DEFENSE. America is not Altogether a Peace-ful Nation.

America is not Altogether a Peaceful Nation.

[Lieut. Wirt Robinson, Fourth United States Artillery, in Collier's Weekly:] Our defenseless condition has for years been well known, and we have shut our eyes to the fact; but the serious aspect assumed lately by the Cuban question has forced us to awaken to our neglect. It would therefore be not inopportune if we should glance at some sides of the problem.

First—The optimist maintains that we are a peaceful nation and have no need of warlike preparations. Facts do not bear this out. Since the Declaration of Independence we have had four wars—one in every thirty years—and have spent one-seventh of our exist-ence as an independent nation in a state of war—one day in every week for 120 years. In the civil war alone we lost more men in battle than has England in all her wars since the time of William the Conqueror.

Again, he will urge that it will be time enough to fortify when war has been declared. This hardly needs refutatione In the last 100 years there are but three cases in which a formal declaration of war preceded hostilities; on the other hand, there are fifty-three recorded instances where hostilities were begun by a European nation without previous declaration. Furthermore, modern wars are short and sharp. The average duration of the five great European wars from 1859 to 1870, from the declaration of war to the striking of the decisive blow, was but seven weeks. When it is remembered that our largest guns require now about three years to complete, the folly of defered the strike our largest guns require now about three years to complete, the folly of defered the strike our largest guns require now about three years to complete, the folly of defered the strike our largest guns require now about three years to complete, the folly of defered the strike our largest guns require now about three years to complete, the folly of defered the strike our largest guns require now about three years to complete, the folly of defered the strike our largest guns require weeks: When it is remembered that our largest guns require now about three years to complete, the folly of de-ferring preparation to the last minute it evident.

I ferring preparation to the last minute it evident.

It is true that our late war lasted four years, during which there were put into the field, from North and South together, some 4,000,000 men; but this should furnish no criterion, since, so far as preparation, or rather lack of preparation went, the two sides were equal.

There is another class who object to present expenditures for fortifications.

This woman, much of whose history has already been given to the readers of The Times, left Philadelphia for New Orleans in 1846. That was before the day of regular steamers between those cities, and she, with a half dozen others, took passage of the bark Ann Hood. The vessel was laden with powder and the feelings of the passengers when, during a storm at sea, thunder and lightning played about them, threatening annihilation every moment, may be imagined.

Further down the coast another storm came up and the vessel went to pieces on a reef near a small island about forty miles east of Key West. The passengers and drew were saved and, after a wearisome delay, sailed in a small craft to their destination, passing close to Dry Tortugas. They had left Philadelphia in October and it was on the first day of the new year that they landed in New Orleans.

The excitement about that city was as intense as is the war feeling of today. A Louisiana regiment was massing and a flag was wanted. Mrs. Dodge was the first to contribute to the sum required for the purchase of the needed colors.

When common, commenced returning from the field. New Orleans was a sort of central depot for receiving them, and the arrangements for caring for the developed extensively, as the need became greater. Churches, stores and business offices were closed and private houses were opened for the accommodation of the sufferers. Much of the work of relief was under direction of the Howard Society.

"The city hospital had been built to accommodate 500 patients, but there were as many as 800 in it some of the ime. I was occupied mostly in caring for the men who had been brought to be a suffered to individual cases at the hospital. The duties of nursing were cared for on the modern instruments of the Mexican war, and upon her experiences fifteen years later, with the sick and wounded solops attended to individual cases at the hospital. The duties of nursing were something tremendous. I was during for the men who had been brought to be a failty of a smany as one could possibly give attention to. There was one period of thirteen days in which I never lay down. At times when utterly give artied into a brief doze.

Thus is Mrs. Elizabeth Dodge of Santa Monica qualified to speak of the threatened war which today occupies the attention of the civilized world. She has passed the four-score mark. the hardest things about my work was in having to go hungry. Frequently it was impossible to get time to eat. The climate didn't hurt me and I could eat heartily when I had a chance.

"Every morning I could see wagon after wagon being driven away, each loaded with eight coffins containing the remains of victims who had died during the night. Before the war was over there were 3000 of the Mexican volunteers, as we called the United States troops, buried near Lake Ponchartrain. When I started to return from New Orleans to Philadelphia in September, 1849, I traveled up the Mississippi River by steamer. The decks were crowded with sick soldlers and the boat would land every few miles to bury those who died."

"How did you begin service in connection with the civil war?"

"I was employed at first at the Volunteer Refreshment saloon in Philadelphia during the winter of 1861-2. Most of the troops going to the front from the New England and some of the other States came by way of Camden, N. J., across the river and landed at the foot of Washington street, in Philadelphia. One of the first companies of soldiers arriving from New York was resting at the foot of Washington street, with arms stacked near them one day, when one of them asked a woman in a house near by to give him a cup of coffee. She said she would if he would give her time. She started to prepare refreshments, and meantime aroused the neighbors and called upon them to do likewise. Soon food and drink were prepared for the troops in plenty.

"The idea spread rapidiy and, after that, the troops passing through Philadelphia were well cared for. Wealthy citizens were among the foremost in the work. Many residents who were descendants of revolutionary patriots did their part, and the building which became known as the Volunteer Refreshment saloon, was erected. Upon the approach of soldiers going to the front a gun would be fired at Fort Brown, on the wharf at the foot of Washington street. The firing would arouse the people and, whether it was night or day, they would turn out to feed the new arrivals. Once, upon the firing of the gun, I got up in the night and made several unsuccessful attempts in the fleree wind and deep snow before I could reach the saloon.

"The troops would march in at one doorway, line up to the tables, stand while eating and march out by a separate evit, thus avoiding confusion. While they were eating we would fill their haversacks. One day we fed 7000 men.

"During part of the war I served in the hospital at Chester and later was required for the purchase of the needed colors.

Dr. Janss is the only manufacturer, dealer or agent who has confidence enough in his Electric Belt to give them the test of a month's free trial. What further guarantee of the superiority of Dr. Janss Electric Belt can be given? Could a more liberal offer be made? Dr. Janss has adopted the plan of sending his Electric Belt out on trial for this reason: Every belt given on trial to a sufferer means a sale, not only to the man who is testing it, but many of his friends will also buy a belt when they learn of its wonderful powers. It would be the rankest sort of folly to send out a worthless belt on trial. It would not only come back, but it would prevent all future sales in the locality where it had been tested. TEACHERS ADJOURN.

SSOCIATION OFFICERS ELECTED FOR THE ENSUING YEAR

inte Superintendent Black Spenk on Certification of Teachers, and Dr. Martin Kellogg on Banner Legends for the Young.

The closing session of the Southern the of members to the First Congreestimate of memors to the First states of the second of the first states of the second the success that had attended this year's meeting.

There were only two papers read, the first being by S. T. Black, Superintendent of Public Instruction, upon the "Certificates of Teachers." It was a clearly thought-out paper, wherein was pointed out the need for amendment to the law. As an illustration attention was drawn to the clause applying more particularly to high school teachers' certificates, limiting them to the teachers of the English language, And yet, as Mr. Black said, many of the teachers are devoting time to the teaching along other lines, and if challenged in a court of law these teachers would have no standing

Attention was also drawn to the fact that the State normal schools are graduating about 350 students every year.

and competition is becoming keen almong teachers. The evil resulting from this is being first seen in the cutting down of salaries in the rural districts, and as a consequence instead of the best teacher being obtained, it is the cheapest one. Mr. Black urged that such changes be made as would give the teacher standing without handicapping, and he also advocate the ignoring of certificates from other than the interest of the state of the states of the standing without handicapping, and he also advocate the ignoring of certificates from other than the state.

After a trio had been capitally rendered by Mrs. Parsons, Miss Wicksch and Miss Goodell, the next paper, on "Banner Legends for the Young," was presented by Dr. Martin Kellong, president of the University of California.

He said that as he looked aver the see of faces he could see in his mind's eye the tens of thousands of children marching past with minds as yet a blank. What impress was to be placed upon them? Many of them almed to make a living—a good thing in itself, but competition has become so acute that even the teaching profession was threatened with degradation. If it is desired to prove to the young that the old saying, "there is plenty of room at the top," is correct, then must they be equipped with all those things which will enable them to be at things which will enable them to be at things which will enable them to be at things which will enable them to be disparaged. In this country there are no class distinctions to be broken down, and it is a laudable thing to look forward to making a name, but here also is danger of degradation. Selfishness may be developed, and a boy concentrating his gaze on what he desires may let in the canker that will corrupt his life."

Dr. Kellogg warned against the dan's geers of the political arena. Days were when the position sought the man, not man the position sought the man, not man the position.

and the great moral law of the universe.

"The national conscience of the country may be ragged in places, but it is overlaid with other consciences until after all, it is a pretty good conscience. Bue we must remember. Physician heal thyself, and if there is not an obedience to the golden rule, there will grow up a selfsh greed,"

Dr. Kellogg, in concluding, hoped for the day when public office and huge corporations would alike be truly regarded as public trusts, and administered for the benefit of the people at large.

The various committees then The various committees then made their reports, which were mainly of a formal character. The Committee of Resolutions made one recommendation that went through with a whirl; that the next annual meeting fewer papers should be presented, and a synop sis of these forwarded beforehand that a more instructive and intelligent discussion be engaged in. Also that through tables be reduced, and opportunity afforded for all to join in general session.

the death rate would be lessened fully 80 per cent.

Last Saturday I accompanied the Senatorial Commission and the Red Cross family to Matanzas, to investigate the condition of affairs in that once flourishing city of perhaps 35,000 inhabitants. First the three-mile carriage ride from our suburb, "the Cerro," to the ferry on the other side of Habana. Then a hasty almuerzo of bread and chocolate in the water-side café la Luz. Then across the bay in the crowded boat, mixed up with chattering Spaniards and Cubans, solders, servants and donkey-carts; past the meloncholy wreck of the Maine, and the Montgomery, lately arrived, and Spain's war vessel, Alphonso XII, te the long rows of now empty sugat warehouses on the Regla side. And then a three-hours' railway ride to Matanzas, capital of the adjoining Province of the same name. Every-

The skeleton in many a household is the peculiar weakness of the wife and mother, or of the wife who ought to be a mother and is not. Happiness is destroyed by the presence of the secret sickness that may lurk like a grinning death among the most luxurious homes. The most terrible thing about this condition of affairs is that it is entirely needless. There is no reason in the world why every woman in the world should not be strong and healthful and capable of fulfalling her whole duty as a wife and mother. Many women go on month after month, and year after year, becoming weaker and weaker, because of a very natural hesitancy they feel in consulting a physician. They know that if they go to a doctor for treatment, the first thing he will insist on will be "examination" and "local treatment." This must of course be distasteful to every modest woman. They are generally as unnecessary as they are abdistasteful to every modest woman. They are generally as unnecessary as they are abhorrent. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures positively, perfectly, permanently, all varieties of "female weakness" and disease. It is designed to do this one thing, and it does it. It is the only medicine now before the public for woman's peculiar ailments, adapted to her delicate organization by a regularly graduated physiciam—an experienced and skilled specialist in these maladies. It cannot do harm in any condition of the system. Its sales exceed the combined sales of all other medicines for women.

Women.

Rvery weman will be healthier and happier for following the friendly, practical counsel contained in Dr. Pierce's great universal doctor book. "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the most comprehensive medical work in one volume in the Hnglish 'anguage. It contains 1008 pages, fully illustrated. 680,000 copies have been sold at $1.50 cach bound in cloth. The profits are now used in printing half-a-million face copies bound in strong manilla paper covers. To get one you have only to send 21 one-cent stamps (to pay cost of mailing only), to World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 63 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y. Send promptly before all are given away if in want of one. They are going off rapidly.

PARALYSIS. A retired physician of this city, a graduate of two famous European medical colleges and for thirty years a leading physician of Denver, Colo, comes to the English and German Exnert Specialists and is cured. "Yes." said Dr John Emerines, "my busy and hard professional life ruined my health, and when I came to California I was in a very bad way, My constitution was broken down and paralysis set in. I tried all the remedies known to my profession, but did not improve. I made up my mind that a set of specialists ought to know more than I did, so I consulted the English and G-rman Expert Specialists. I certainly found them all they claimed to be-masters of chronic disease. I was also suffering from kidney trouble, and now, after five months' treatment, I am feeling entirely well and have completely recovered from my paralysis. I give this testimony in justice to those able specialists, who deserve the confidence of the whole community. JOHN EMERINES, M.D."

It ried many remedies and many education of the sufference of th these eminent physicians last fall and improved very rapidly. Inside of sixty days my weight had increased 14 pounds, and I am still galning. I am also sound and well and feel like a young man once more, thanks to the great skill of the English and German Expert Specialists. I have often heard that they were the doctors that do all they claim, and am now convinced that it is true."

HEART, "For years," said Miss attila Carillo of GENERAL Santa Monica, "I suf-DEBILITY fered from weakness, and seemed to be slowly wasting away. I had no strength or ambition, and nothing the doctors prescribed for me had any effect on my trouble. My heart grew weak and fluttered till I thought it would suddenly stop altogether, and my circulation became so weak I was cold as ice all over. My blood grew so thin and watery that I hadn't a particle of color in my lips or skin. I was advised to consult the English and German Specialists and my recovof color in my lips or skin. We may take all kinds of chances with anything except our health, but when life and happiness are at stake delays and experimenting should be shunned. People who intrust their present and future welfare in the keeping of the English and German Expert Specialists, with "the doctors that cure," make no mistake; they would be in safe hands. They would be dealing with honorable, competent, experienced and painstaking physicians, men whose standing in business, social and professional circles is the highest-above reproach.

THE NEW CUBA.

SSUMING that Cuban independence is a strong probability, if not an actual cer-Atainty, of the near future, the question becomes pertinent, what will Cuba do with her independence after it has been achieved? What is to be the fate of the fair island which has been drenched with the blood of its people and desolated by a system of warfare which has no parallel in the annals of civilization outside of Spanish history? When Spain has been driven out of Cuba, will the Cubans have the wisdom to use their newly-acquired freedom wisely, and to their own best advantage? Some new and difficult problems will press upon them for solution, which will call for the exercise of the highest statesmanship, the wisest self-restraint, and the broadest liberality. Will the statesmen of the new republic be equal to the emergency?

These questions can be fully answered only by the developments of the future. The paramount problem of the present is Cuban independence; but with the solution of this problem, which now seems near at hand, will come others scarcely less grave, which the newly-enfranchised people of Cuba must solve for themselves. They can rely for counsel and assistance upon the United States in an emergency, but they will be in effect the architects of their own future.

The island of Cuba is 730 miles long, and has an average breadth of about eighty miles. Its total area is 43,319 square miles, or somewhat less than that of the State of New York, and less than one-third the area of California. Columbus, who discovered the island in 1492, described it as "the most beautiful land that eyes ever beheld." In fertility and wealth of resources it is an empire.

At the outbreak of the rebellion the population of Cuba was about 1,500,000. It is probably less than a million at the present time. The development of Cuba has been greatly retarded by the unwise and oppressive rule of Spain, which has wrung from its people every dollar of tribute that could be exacted.

Under a liberal and just form of government Cuba would have made marvelous progress during the 400 years which have elapsed since its discovery. But Spanish rule in Cuba, as in other portions of the world, has dwarfed development, stunted progress, and destroyed the hopes and ambitions of the people. The socalled "peasantry" have been made the serfs of lowa, you are all right! the ruling class. Their rights as men have been ruthlessly trampled upon, their property has been destroyed, or taken from them by force, and they have been deprived of all that renders fife desirable.

With free and independent Cuba will be inangurated—or should be inaugurated—a new the road receive 35 cents per day.

and better régime. The form of government will undoubtedly be that of a republic, and it will probably be modeled after that of the United States. If the spirit of liberty and tolerance which has made the United States foremost among the nations of the earth, be transplanted to the soil of Cuba, the new order of things will bring a great and marvelous change to that unhappy island. A new era of development and progress will be inaugurated. Her barren fields will bourgeon and blossom into fruitfulness. Her desolated homes will be rebuilded. The terrible scars of war will be healed, and the waste places will be reclaimed.

Free Cuba has a magnificent future, but it will depend upon the realization of the best conditions of a liberal and stable government. If these conditions be realized, the recovery of Cuba from its present condition of desolation will be rapid and marvelous. American capital will flow into the island in enormous volume, and thousands of our people will build there prosperous and happy homes. The island will become more and more like one of the States of our mighty republic. If domestic discord threaten its peace, the counsel and influence of the United States may be invoked, and not in vain, to restore tranquility. It may be that, in the course of time, Cuba will of her own accord seek annexation to the American Union. Such a consummation may become necessary or desirable in the future, when Cuba shall have be come fully Americanized. This is a remote contingency of the future. Our present purpose is Cuban independence, not annexation.

DISAPPEARING GUNS.

[Lieut. Wirt Robinson, Fourth U. S. Artillery, in Collier's Weekly.] HE disappearing carriages are built in accordance with any one of a number of mechanical principles; but, whatever system be employed, the practical operation is the same. In front of the gun is an immense shield of sand and concrete, presenting no projection or angles which would reveal its location. Be-hind this the gun lies hid. It is loaded, given the proper elevation and direction, rises, discharges projectile, and the recoil returns it to its hidden position.

To test the value of such mountings, the English conducted experiments at Portland in 1885. A pit was dug in the natural slope of a hill, and in this pit a wooden model of a large gun was mounted upon a disappearing carriage. It was arranged to appear for half a minute at intervals of three minutes, emit a puff of smoke and disappear. The Hercules, at 800 yards, fired in ten minutes 6910 rounds from the machine guns, and twenty-nine rounds from its 6-pounders. The gun stuck at the seventh min-ute and could not be hauled down. In spite of this it was struck only sixteen times, and had it been steel the effect would have been simply to scratch the paint. Besides this, twenty-eight 10-inch shells were fired at it from a distance of 2500 yards, and no hits were made, the shell striking from 300 yards short to 300 yards over, and from 120 yards left to 130 yards right. This was under circumstances unfavorable to the gun, since it did not return the fire. A fixed gun subjected to a similar test was struck over 200 times.

Comparatively few persons are aware of the fact that the total seacoast of Alaska exceeds that of the remainder of the United States some two and one-half times. The great extent of the Alaskan seacoast is due to the large number of islands.

New York, Ohio and Iowa have voted a war fund, as was to be expected. The troops from those States always managed to get in early where the fighting was as hot as tophet, and they are ready again. New York, Ohio and American contractors are constructing the first railway to be built in Korea. It will extend from Chemulpo, on the Yellow Sea, to Seoul, the capital, a distance of twenty-five miles. The native laborers who are at work on

STAND BY THE PRESIDENT.

ELIBERATION is not always the evil that some people appear to think it. It is doubtedly true that the United States has at no time since the close of the last war been properly equipped with coast defenses or a navy of such power as our great unguarded stretch of seacoast demands. We do not want to be put into the position of a soldier going into a battle without a gun in his hands, or, if he has a gun, one that is only an old flintlock musket, without a flint. We submit that the President knows the condition the country is in, in this respect, better even than the able and bloodthirsty editors who are howling for a declaration of war, and that it be declared instanter. Every day's time is of momentous importance in making preparation for the awful combat that seems to be impending; therefore, let our people possess their souls in patience, with reliance upon the wisdom, patriotism and level-headedness of the men who are at the head of affairs. It is the part of loyalty to keep cool and exercise patience, to confide in the honor and integrity of the Chief Executive, and to await his movements in the spirit of the soldier who knows his general, who has been tried in the red fire of battle. Our President will not disappoint his countrymen when the proper time comes to act; of that we may rest assured. He knows all the conditions that confront the country better than can any individual citizen who is not on the inside, and when it is time to strike, depend upon it he will strike, and strike hard. Then let us, as good citizens, as patriots, as men of sense and understanding, not harass and hamper the man who is carrying the tremendous burden that now lies upon his shoulders; but, serene in our strength, and confident in the justice of our cause, let us support him without cavil and complaint, as the nation stood by the martyred Lincoln in far darker days than these. Men and patriots! stand by the President!

The week just begun will, in all probability, determine the issue of peace or war between the United States and Spain. From present indications no way is apparent by which war can be avoided, except through a complete backdown on the part of Spain. There is a possibility that this may come at the eleventh hour, when Spain is thoroughly convinced that the United States is determined to enforce its demands. If war is resorted to, our government should, and no doubt will, throw its best energies into the conflict, in order that the struggle may be as brief

A bill has been introduced in the Maryland Legislature appropriating $200,000 for war purposes. The States of the Union are steadily falling into line, and will give the government valuable aid and support when it is needed.

THE TELEECTROSCOPE.

HERR SZCZEPANIK'S WONDERFUL INVENTION FULLY EXPLAINED.

By a Special Contributor.

POOR Galician school teacher is reported to have solved a problem over which many leading scientists have labored in vain for years. It is announced that he has per-fected an apparatus which will not only transmit pictures by wire, but which will transmit moving images in all of their natural colors. That is, the apparatus is so all-sufficient in opera-tion that if a man were to bow to the transmitter in New York, his image in the act of bowing would be repro-duced on a screen in Chicago, or in any other city to which the line might extend. His facial expression, his clothes, his very wink, would be ac-curately transmitted. Indeed, it would seem that at last we are to be able to see by wire, and a detailed de-scription of the apparatus shows that the performance is, after all, a very simple one.

An English patent attorney says that Herr Szczepanik, the inventor of the process, has been offered over $1,000,000 for the right to exhibit the apparatus in the Paris Exposition of 1900. It is also said that the inventor perfected his theory of how images and colors could be sent by wire in one night. This is indeed wonderful, in view of the facts that Alexander Graham Bell has been at work on a similar process second part of the proposition seems to contain the germ of an idea for photographing in colors.

THE MAGICAL MIRRORS.

The process appears to be very complicated at first glance, but it is, after all, quite simple. The inventor, in order to prepare his images for transmission, found it necessary to split, or break them up into a series of dots. He accomplished this in a peculiar manner. He procured a small mirror and blackened its surface with an opaque substance. He then scratched on it rows of lines running generally in the same direction, but not quite parallel. The lines were cut with an needle point, and exposed the reflecting surface of the mirror along each line. They were close together, and when the mirror was allowed to reflect an object it would do so only along these lines. Another plate was prepared upon which similar lines were drawn, only they were made to extend crosswise to those on the first mirror. Now, if a large beam of sunlight, were allowed to shine against the first mirror, and then to be reflected off against a wall, the light would be divided up into a series of lines of light. Then, if, before hitting the wall, the lines of light were allowed to strike the crosswise lines of the second mirror, the result, when the light finally struck the wall, would be rows of dots of light, because, when the light finally struck the wall, would be reflected only where the lines intersected one another. If, while this broken-up beam of light was shining on the wall, the two places were to be slightly moved backward and forward, the angle of, reflection would change, as would also the places of intersection of the lines on the plates, and the consequence would be that the dots on the wall would go dancing up and down and about in all directions within a small area.

An arrangement of mirrors, similar in principle to the above, is made to receive the images which are to be transmitter case is a narrow horizontal slit. Directly back of this slit or opening is a mirror with lines cut on it as in the fir

However, the cardinal claim made for the new invention is that moving images may really be him successively from head to foot and telegraphy. However, the cardinal claim made for the new invention is that moving images may really be seen in a gloss hundreds of miles away from the initial point of transmission, and that their colors are also reproduced very naturally. It really partakes of the spirit of that wenderful mirror of fairyland, which had to be breathed upon merely in order to produce any wished-for scene. And the

Of course, all the colors of his costume are reflected as well as the shape of his body.

TURNING COLORS INTO ELECTRIC CURRENTS.

In the top of the box, behind a small partition, is a resistance cell or plate made of selenium. Selenium is a very sensitive substance. If a current of electricity is sent through it it will resist the passage of the current, and cut it down, according to the temperature and the light in which it may happen to arate the various rays of that light and spread them out in the form of a spectrum, of band of colored light. All of the reds in the beam will be shown at one end of the spectrum, all of the blues at the other end, with the intermediate colors between. In the receiver of Szczepanik's apparatus a powerful incandescent lamp was placed just back of the prism, which moved on a pivot. Naturally, the prism took up the beam of electric light and separated it into a spectrum, or band of light, with the reds at one end of the band and the blues at the other end. This band of variously-colored light shone against a partition in the upper part of the receiving apparatus. There was a narrow silt in this partition, cut so that only one color be. For instance, if an electric current is passing through a piece of selenium while a red light is shining on it, the quantity of current which will finally get through will be very different from what it would be if the selenium were to be placed in blue light. This very sensitive characteristic of selenium is taken advantage of to transmit pictures by wire. The dots of light, which really form the image to be transmitted, are allowed to play through a narrow slit in the partition against the selenium cell in the top of the box. The selenium is part of the circuit or wire through which the picture is to be transmitted. This circuit may, for all practical purposes, be hundreds of miles long. An electric current is made to flow through it, and, consequently, through the selenium. Now the reflection of the man outside the box, with all the colors of his costume, is being projected constantly against the selenium in the top of the box, and this rapid interchange of color is causing the electric current which flows through the selenium. It therefore follows that an electric current is easily obtained, the strength of which depends entirely on the nature of the color which is projected against the selenium. The transmission of colors, or, at least, the transmission of their equivalent in electric currents, is what has been accomplished.

Having accomplished the feat of sending colors, or their equivalents, by For instance, if an electric current tric currents, is what has been accomplished.

Having accomplished the feat of sending colors, or their equivalents, by telegraph, it now became necessary to separate the various parts or intensities of this varying current, and to resolve them into colors again at the other end of the line. In short, just as the selenium was able to change colors into their equivalents in current, popularly speaking, so must some method be found of changing these currents back into their equivalent colors. It was done in the following manner. The line which transmitted all of these varying currents ended at the receiverln a coil which formed an electromagnet. When the splenium allowed heavy currents to flow over the wire the electro-magnet became very jowerful. When weak currents flowed over the line the electro-magnet became weak. In front of the core of this magnet a large prism was placed. It hung in a horizontal position, and moved on a pivot. Attached to it was a piece of soft iron. This iron was naturelly affected by the magnet, and caused the prism to move backward or forward, as strong or weak currents flowed from the selenium at the other end of the line.

of the band of light could shint through at a time. By moving the prism backward and forward it was easy to start at one end of the colored beam of light and make first the red lights shine through, and so on along the beam until the blue or violets were reached.

inghts shine through, and so on along the beam until the blue or violets were reached.

Now, when the selenium in the first apparatus was affected by red light and a current corresponding in strength to red was therefore allowed to flow through the wire, the second apparatus was so adjusted that 'the electro-magnet would turn the prism around, so that only red light would shine through the slit mentioned above. When a current corresponding in strength to blue was transmitted, the magnet turned the prism around until only blue light was allowed to shine through the slit. So that, if the man who stood in front of the transmitter wore a blue necktie, and the blue, of that tie was reflected by the mirrors against the selenium, the latter would immediately cut down the current so that the prism would be turned around until only blue could shine through the slit. If his necktie had been red the prism would be turned until only red could shine through the slit. Thus it will be seen that the mere fact of transmitting colors became a comparatively easy matter. In the lower part of the receiver were two mirrors exactly similar in size, construction, and action to the two mirrors in the transmitter, and from these the colors are thrown on a screen.

APPARATUS FOR REGLIVING PICTURES
BY WIRE.

IZED.

It is a well-known fact that if a strong beam of light is projected through a prism, the latter will sep-possible to make these colors resolve themselves into proper shapes? How wilf we know that it is the man's necktle that is red or blue, and not his coat or his vest? To answer this, it must first be stated that the pair of mirrors in the transmitter and the pair of mirrors in the receiver move synchronously; that is, they move or oscillate in perfect time. If the lower mirror in the transmitter assumed for a moment an angle of 45.5 deg., then the lower mirror in the receiver assumed that exact angle at the same instant. If the upper mirror in the transmitter momentarily assumed an angle of 42.6 deg., at the same instant. In short, the pair of mirrors move together in perfect time and in the same direction constantly. Now, if the two mirrors in the transmitter happen to be at certain angles when they send a reflection through the slit on to the selenium, it follows that if the reflection were to be returned to those same mirrors again through that same slit at the same instant, it would naturally sperad itself over them in the same from them. In short, if the mirrors were in a position at rest so that they could send a triangle of red light through the slit, it would be Impossible to send the red light back again through the slit, and have it reflected in any other form than a triangle. The mirrors would have to be moved before the reflected light could assume any other form than a triangle.

SCCZEPANIK, THE INVENTOR.

Hence, as the mirrors in the receiver are precisely the same in size, shape, movement, etc., as the mirrors in the transmitter, and as the size and position of the slits are precisely the same in both cases, it follows that the second pair of mirrors must have the same reflections shot into them as were projected out of the first pair. If a circle of red is reflected out of the upper portion of the first two mirrors through the slit in the first box, a red light coming from the slit in the second box could not strike the mirrors in that box anywhere but on a corresponding upper portion. All the other portions of the mirrors are for the moment-out of focus. So, the position and shape of every projected image is determined by the position of the mirrors, and the color of every image is determined by the movements of the prism.

THE SAME PRINCIPLE AS THE

THE SAME PRINCIPLE AS THE KINETOSCOPE.

THE SAME PRINCIPLE AS THE KINETOSCOPE.

The value of cutting the reflections of the mirrors into points now becomes apparent. The escillating mirrors make it possible for only a very small fraction of any image to be seen at a time. For instance, the image of the man standing before the transmitter is shown successively from head to foot, or from foot to head, or in any other direction, but the movement is so rapid that the optic nerve accommodates itself to the condition and really appears to take in his whole form at once. A wheel, for instance, running rapidly down hill, appears to be solid if the spokes are very thick, whereas there is really a great deal of open space between the spokes. The rapidly-moving photographs in the kinetoscope, although radically different one from the other, appear to be one moving picture when flashed rapidly past the eye. Likewise, in this new system of seeing by wire, the constantly-moving succession of reflecting dots really appear to the eye like one solid and moving picture.

The above is, in brief, a description of the principle and theory of Herr Szczepanik's apparatus for sending colored pictures by wire. If the inventor has succeeded in adjusting his apparatus so as to produce the remarkable combination described above, he has indeed accomplished something which may do as much, if not more, for civilization than the kinetoscope for it is so far ahead of the kinetoscope as the latter is ahead of the common photograph. One may now be able to sit at home and see a theatrical performance which is taking place in a far distant city. Or, as in the accompanying illustration, a queen of the ballet can perform in front of a teleectroscope receiver, and have every motion of her graceful form transmitted and exhibited to the delight of audiences hundreds, of miles away; and all the colors of her costume would be distinctly reproduced. It has been suggested that, inasmuch as the apparatus will be installed at the Paris Exposition of 1900, many persons who will be unable to go to that great show will still be able to see its varied scenes reflected through the mirrors of the teleectroscope. These, at least, are the alluring promises which are made by the projectors of the apparatus.

Apple Cores and Peelings

Apple Cores and Peelings.

[Bulletin of Commerce.] The letter to Secretary J. A. Filcher of the State Board of Trade, by Eugene Germain from Zurich, Switzerland, with an inquiry for apple cores—and peelings, packed in barrels, may open a new field for an industry here, which would utilize what has so far been wasted, and certainly deserves attention. As I understand it, these are to be used for the manufacture of fruit jellies, as the cores contain about all the material for that purpose. But now let me make a suggestion. The quince contains, in its peelings and cores, a better and more fragrant material for jellies than the apple, and flourishes and bears nowhere as well as in this State. Why not include it? I am sure it would find a more ready market than the apple even. But it is not alone the peeling and cores which are wanted there. Mr. Germain also inquires about the price of sundried, unpeeled apples in quarters, packed in barrels. They are consumed in that condition in Europe, and there is a good reason for it. Anyone familiar with fruit knows that the best flavor of it is next to the skin or peel, and that you cannot enjoy it fully if the peel and perhaps part of the flesh is taken off. The farther from the peel, the less the flavor. That is why the practice of using unpeeled dried fruit is generally used in Europe,

The individual who designs hosiery has let his fancy run free and there is a bewildering array of checks, stripes and dots in every possible combination. Some men insist on clinging to plain and modest black, and their taste can

Another new thing which was fore-shadowed last fall consists of distinct stripes, perhaps a quarter or half inch wide. In this combination there should be no contrast, and the nearer the two shades approximate the better.

Ascots in colors are worn with sack suits as well. The four-in-hand persists as it has for years, but the scarf with flowing ends, known as the imperial, has the call just now. It is tied in a close knot and may be worn with the high turn-down collar as well as the ordinary stand-up kind. The other kind of the that will be worn is the string, which has found popular favor because it reveals the beauties of a handsome shirt to advantage.

The new derby hat is made with fuller crown and a little more ample curi of brim than the style of a year ago. The proper shades are seal brown, or, of course, black. Every year about this time the little round-topped London derby makes its appearance on our streets, but sensible Americans refuse to take kindly to it. For variation with the derby the Alpine is always appropriate in the spring and autumn, but the fastidious man will not wear the gray with black band, either a pearl, with pearl band, or a light brown is in better taste.

The particular young man will exercise care in the selection of his shoes. The razor toe is an exiled abomination, but the extremely blunt bulldog shape is little better. A medium-rounded toe, with a cap of generous length, is the most satisfactory.

besides the immense saving in labor, which is not estimated there as high as here. Here are two hints for our California growers, which they may well heed. Our California fruits, unless the orchards are near a dusty road, are cleaner than those of any other country, owing to our rainless summers, our apples are brighter and their skin smoother than those of any country, and if we can establish a trade beyond and if we can establish a trade beyond the waters with our dried apples unpared, we can hold it against the world. This is an improtant matter which well deserves close attention. The same may be applied to our pears, which are a favorite dried fruit in Europe, and may create a market, relieving us of any surplus of Bartletts. We are only on the threshold of the development of all our industries, and should neglect no opportunity to make them known to the world, and drier fruits can be more easily and safely, more cheaply transported than in any other way, green or canned. It goes without saying, that we must also show it to be cleaner and better. Thus our Sultannas and Thompson's seedless raisins will make their way over the so-called. But the prison stripe has taken in this country only with the sporting fraternity, faddists and men who order their shirts by the dozen. The modest man still prefers a lengthwise stripe of blue, red or heliotrope, in which plenty of variety of patterns can be found.

In selecting a spring suit a man should be governed somewhat by consideration of the extent of his wardrobe. If it is limited and he is under the necessity of wearing the same suit several days in the week, he would do well to avoid certain patterns, which, though attractive in themselves, become prominent by too frequent wearing, it is inconvenient for a man if his friends and fellow-citizens can always identify him by his clothes.

Beethoven's attention for many years before. The first two movemeits were written in 1805, and sketches for them have been found as early as 1800. The symphony is probably the best known and most admired of the nine, perhaps because it is the most human in its qualities. Beethoven himself has left us a clew to its meaning, and with that clew nearly all critics have arrived at substantially the same decision—namely, that it pictures the struggle of the individual with fate, the alternations of hope and despair, and the final triumph.

"In speaking of the first four notes of the opening movement, Beethoven said, some time after he had finished the symphony: Thus fate knocks at the door, and between that opening knock and the tremendous rush and sweep of the finale, the emotions which come into play in the great conflicts of life are depicted: Berlioz says of this symphony: "It appears to me to be the direct and unmixed product of the genius of its author, the development of his most individual. His secret sorrow, his fits or rage or depression, his visions by night, and his dreams of enthusiasm by day, form the subjects of the work, while the forms of both melody and harmony, of rhythm and instrumentation, are as essentially new and original as they are powerful and noble."

"It is not marked by a spontaneous flow of musical phrases lightly strung together, or by mere toying with musical forms; but each motive represents a concentrated essence of thought which, once heard, makes an indelible impression and apparently admits of no change. His sketch-book shows what infinite labor Beethoven bestowed upon the modelling of these unique themes before he adopted the forms in which they are used in the symphony."

themes before he adopted the forms in which they are used in the symphony."

Los Angeles's music lovers are to be afforded great and splendid opportunities to hear some of the foremost artists of the musical world, who are to visit the Pacific Coast this spring—that is if sufficient encouragement is offered. S. H. Friedlander of San Francisco, who has been managing Mr. Crawford's Coast tour, is arranging for a series of concerts by a quartet composed of Ysaye, Pugno, Gerardy and Marteau, a combination that could not be excelled the world over—and it is very likely that these great artists will be heard here in May or early in June. Arrangements are also being made to bring Josef Hofmann, the famous planist, to the coast for a tour of ten concerts, two of which will be given in this city. The splendid Kneisel Quartet, whose success both, and the East and abroad is known by, eyery music-lover, will also be heard, lagre in May. The first great event, however, will be the appearance of Melba at Hazard's Pavilion on the 25th, 27th and 29th of this month. Mr. Blanchard of this city has received a telegram stating that Mme. Melba will be accompanied by her own company, orchestna and chorus.

Charles A. Ellis, who has directed the personal management of Madame Melba for the last three years, has associated with him Walter Damrosch in the enterprise and will personally direct the tour which will cover a territory of over ten thousand miles, it will be undertaken under the most ambitious scale, and will give to California, to the Pacific Coast and the territory lying west of the Mississippi River grand opera in Italian on a scale not yet attempted in that country, and to the millions of people in these sections of the United States, the opportunity to the him the sections of the United States, the opportunity grand opera in Italian on a scale not yet attempted in that country, and to the millions of people in these sections of the United States, the opportunity of hearing the most absolute mistress in the world of vocal music.

Melba needs no eulogy. She commands the fealty of all in whom there is a responsive chord to the inspiration of the drvine art of singing. She is today High Priestess in the Temple of Song, the representative of its perfection and the realization of its highest aim. The memories of Malibran, Nilsson, Gerster and Patti, whose splendid gifts raised them to the pedestal of divinity in the estimation of those who love the purity of voice and method, are revived and glorified in Melba, whose peerless art has never been surpassed, whose voice is the richest gift ever placed by the Bestower of Blessings in the throat of a beautiful woman. Melba as a singer represents the very acme of vocal beauty. The announcement of her coming tour is really a declaration of renewed triumphs for her in the realm of musical conquest where her surpassing voice has not yet resounded.

The confidence with which the man-resounded.

The confidence with which the managers of Melba and her company have embarked upon this ambitious departure, is the surest indication of their faith in her supreme talent. During her tour she will most often appear in her most successful role-Rosina in the "Barber of Seville"—in the interpretation of which character she has set a standard so high that critical opinion has declared past and future represensations of the part must be judged from the standpoint of her rendition.

The musical world has suffered an irreparable loss in the death of Anton Seidl, the conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Herr Seidl was an intimate associate of Wagner, and had won a reputation as a Wagnerian conductor who had probaly no superiors and few equals. His death occurred last Monday in New York. Private funeral services were held over the remains at the Seidl residence, at which H. E. Krehblel read a eulogy telegraphed from Pittsburgh by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, who had been for years an intimate friend of the great conductor. The exercises closed with music by Victor Herbert. Public services were held at the Metropolitan Operahouse.

[New York Sun:] "Hiawatha," a cantata by Frederick R. Burton, will receive its first public rendering on April 28, by the Yonkers Choral Society, a body organized and directed by Mr. Burton. The cantata represents the best activity of its author during the last ten years. In this musical presentment of the aboriginal American figure of Hiawatha, Mr. Burton has retained the verses of Longfellow's classic as text. The composition is distinctly choral, adapted to performance by large bodies of mixed voices. It is, in truth, "The Song of Hiawatha." The general character of the music is lyrical. The several personages of the poem are musically characterized. The old Indian arrow-maker is stoically grave and forecasting; Minnehaha (Laughing Water.) has the rippling joyousness of her name, and Hiawatha is the true type of the sylvan heroic. The task Mr. Burton set himself was that of producing a choral work, adapted to mixed voices by assimilating the graceful types of the poet, and creating their musical embodiment without straining after rococo effects. There is not a single number to whose effect the chorus is not contributory. The score of Mr. Burton's work was at once accepted by the Oliver Ditson Company of Boston, the first publisher to whom it had been submitted.

The Yonkers Choral Society will find in this maiden production of its director a stimulus to its worthiest efforts. Seidl's orchestra will be drawn upon for the instrumental part of the work.

The popular concert given at the Blanchard-Fitzgerald Hall Friday evening by Miss Rosina Rosin, contralto, Misss Mabel Kratz, soprano, and Miss Ruth Green, violiniste and pianiste, was attended by a large and appreciative audience.

The composer Franz Behr, has just died at Dresden. His fame rests on a number of pianoforte compositions dear to drawing-room amateurs.

The Thomas concerts in New York have attracted enormous audiences, the huge Metropolitan Operahouse having been crowded at each performance.

There will be a great Saxon music festival at Dresden this year. The Gewandhaus Orchestra of Liepzig will take part in it, as well as the Royal Orchestra of Dresden.

Miss Rose Ettinger has met with most emphatic success in Breslau and Koenigsburg. She was the soloist of the Hamburg Philharmonic Society on March 24 and 25.

Max Bruch has just finished a new choral work, "Gustav Adolphe," a sec-ular oratorio, which is to be heard the first time on May 22 at Barmen, under the direction of the composer.

Among the rumors that drift across the Atlantic is one that Leschetizky is to leave Vienna and establish himself in Berlin. The reason for this move is that Vienna no longer compares with Berlin as a musical center.

Four completed plays by Richard Wagner are in the possession of his widow, Cosima, and may be published in the near future. They are entitled "Luther," "Frederick the Great," "Hans Sach's Second Marriage," and "Duke Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar."

It is told of Brahms's father, who was a contra-bass player in a Hamburg orchestra, that the conductor remarked that he was playing too loud, whereupon old man Brahms retorted: "Herr Capellmeister, this is my contrabass and I shall play on it as loud as I please."

Feminine composers seem to get their works to the front in Italy more than in any other country, except perhaps in France. The latest opera announced from a woman's pen is "Max," by Sig nora Nissim-Rosselli. The Pagliano Theater, Florence, has accepted it, and the work will shortly be produced.

At Carisruhe, a new opera by Thille has just been produced under the direction of Felix Motti. The work, which is entitled "Lobetanz," had a much more spontaneous success than the same composer's "Theuerdank," which won the prize at Munch last year, and played at the Theater Royal of that town.

The new oratorio, "St. Christopher," by Prof. H. W. Parker, makes heavy demands on the male voices, even the choruses allotted to them being as difficult as they are effective. In the coming performance of the work by the Oratorio Society of New York the part of Satan will be sung by Ffrang-com Davies, Ericsson Bushness has the bass role of "Offerus," and Evan Williams takes the solos of king and hermit. The music assigned to "A Child's Voice" will be sung by Harry Smith, boy soprano of Grace Church choir. Mme. Juch also will sing.

Cesare Ponsicchi of the Royal Musical Institute, Florence, has just published an interesting pamphlet entitled "II Primo Planoforte Verticale" (the first upright piano.) He gives the honor of inventing upright pianos to Domenico del Mela, master of the Gaglianoschool in 1739, and to another Italian, Frederici de Gara, he gives the honor of making a much more perfect instrument in 1745. The pamphlet throws considerable light on the history of piano making, which is for the most part buried in obscurity. It is interesting to trace the evolution of the instrument from its humble beginning to the superb pianos that we possess today.

A communication was yesterday re-ceived by Secretary Wiggins of the Chamber of Commerce, from the Board of Trade of San Francisco, intimating that from 120 to 150 of the large display jars had been broken in the exhibit-room, by the earthquake. In the Lo-Angeles county display, however, only Angeles county display, however, only three display jars were broken, and this, Secretary Filcher explained, was due to the substantial manner in which the frame for the reception of the Los Angeles exhibit had been constructed. Very encouraging reports have been received at the Chamber of Commerce from the railroad companies regarding the carriage of exhibits to the Omaha Exposition. The rates will be little more than the terminal charges. Capt. C. E. Thom sent in yesterday from the Bellhurst ranch, near Glendale, a fine cluster of grape fruit. There are twelve fully-developed grapefruit on the cluster. He also forwarded a large bunch of dates.

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT ON THE RESURRECTION.

By a Special Contributor,

ASTER DAY becomes every year the occasion of a wider and deeper joy among religious peo ple; for the instinct of the Christian world has fastened upon this great festival of the Christian year as the consummate proof of immortality The risen Christ is a fact in history, not a demonstrattion, and in the risen Christ immortality finds its shining and indestructible evidence. But in the larger religious thought of the time Christ is related more and more closely to the whole order of God's dealing with man. It is seen more and more that his appearance in the world marks, not the defeat of a divine design, but its consummation; that he comes, not to save a remnant, but humanity; that redemption is not for the elect, but for society. The great idea of immortality must, therefore, find its evidence, not only in the re-appearance of the visible Christ after the crucifixion and the sepulcher, but also in the total impression which the whole creation makes on the mind.

But in resurrection itself lies the depth of the Easter thought. At last the repeated prophecies of Christ were finding their way into the disciples' hearts, and they were beginning dimly to perceive the approaching passion of their Lord. He had told them that one of them should betray him, that all should forsake him, that one should deny him: no wonder their hearts were troubled, no wonder they were were troubled, no wonder they were afraid. It would seem as if he needed support: he who was to go out and wrestle with the strange anguish in Gethsemane; he who was to bear the shame and spitting in the court of Caiaphas; he who was to hear the restitution. vilings and the outcries of the very men whom he loved and had come to save; he who was to be crucified be-tween the two thieves. But he did not ask for comfort—he gave it; and in this hour when the shadows gathered darkly over the hearts of the disciples, he uttered these words: "Let not your heart be troubled; neither let it be afraid; ye have faith in God, have faith also in me."

faith also in me."

The accounts of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, as given in the four Gospels, may here be condensed into a sentence: Jesus Christ was sentenced to death; the priests and Pharisees were present to make sure that he should not escape their malice; had he been taken from the cross before he been taken from the cross before death was assured, the centurion would have paid the penalty of his neglect with his own life; and, finally, neglect with his own life; and, finally, the death of the crucified was demonstrated before the body was taken from the cross, by the thrust of the spear into the side. The body was buried in the tomb on Friday evening. On Sunday morning the disciples came to the tomb to find it empty; they were in despair, thinking that the body had been stolen; nor was their despair overcome until after repeated appearances of the risen Lord to them, singly and in companies. This is the singly and in companies. This is the account. Is it so far consistent with what we know of God's way of deing things as to be inherently credible? If is it sufficiently attested by ade-ate evidence to be credited? My swer to both these questions is in quate evidence the affirmative.

The body returns to earth, the spirit to God who gave it. This disembodying of the spirit we call death. There is at death an end of the body. It knows no resurrection save in grass and flowers. The resurrection, the anastasis or unstanding as the New and flowers. The resurrection, the anastasis or up-standing as the New Testament calls it, is the resurrection of the spirit. The phrase "resurrection of the body" never occurs in the New Testament. But every death is a resurrection of the spirit. The spirit is released from its confinement, and this release is death. Death is, in short, not a cessation of existence, not a break in existence, it is simply what a break in existence; it is simply what Socrates declared it to be: "The sepa-ration of the soul and body." The Christian who holds this view of death and resurrection believes that that occurred to Jesus Christ which occurs to all God's children at death; the spirit was separated from the body to exist was separated from the body to exist in itself. In this general belief in a phenomenon transcending experience there is nothing more inconsistent with evolution than in belief in the separation of the child from the mother at birth, or in the belief that the grub issues at a certain stage of its existence from its subaqueous existence and enters upon a new experience as a dragon-fly. In brief, evolution is not inconsistent with the idea that a not inconsistent with the idea that a living creature in one stage of existence is being prepared for a future stage of existence, which will entirely transcend the present experience; on the contrary that is precisely what it teaches us to expect. The only real question in respect to the resurrection of Jesus Christ is not, "Is it incredible that the resurrection took place?" but, "Is it incredible that it was followed by such appearances to the disciples as to bring it within the range of their as to bring it within the range of their observation, and afford them tangible evidence that it had taken place?" Such evidence that it had taken place?" Such an appearance is certainly extraordinary; but it appears to me not at all incredible that either the spirit should have returned to reanimate the body or that it should have given visible evidence of itself as disembodied, for the very purpose of converting what was in Socrates and Cicero a mere varue expectation, into what has bevague expectation, into what has beout the ages an assured and certain

Assuming that the appearance of Jesus Christ to his disciples after his death is not inherently incredible, are they so attested that we have reason to credit them? An adequate answer to this question cannot be expected to be crowded into a paragraph, when volumes have been written in answering it. I can only say in the briefest terms why I regard those appearances as among the best attested facts of as among the ancient history.

Literary study has demonstrated that three of the four gospels were written in less than half a century after Christ's death, that the fourth Gospel was written within three-quarters of a century after that death, and that in all four we have substantial. and that in all four we have substan-tially the testimony of the eyewit-nesses themselves, not the product of a later tradition. That these eyewit-nesses were not intentional deceivers is now universally admitted; that they were deceived by Jesus Christ, as they would have been on the supposition would have been on the supposition that He did not really die, but only swooned, no one will now pretend to affirm: that their belief was the product of their enthusiastic expectations of a resurrection, as Renan suggests, is absolutely inconsistent with all that we know of these singularly prosaic, unemotional, unimaginative characunemotional, unimaginative charac-ters, and with all that the accounts tell of their disbelief in the first reports and of the frequent appearances necessary to convince them of the fact of the resurrection.

If their testimony stood alone, it would probably be disregarded by the great majority of mankind as unimportant, if not incredible. But it does not stand alone. It is closely related to the most stupendous changes which have taken place in the world. The most visible of these is the institution of the First Day of the week as one recognized by Roman Catholic, Greek, Anglican and Puritan, and is coming to be recognized by Jews, and demanded as a privilege by unbelievers. This day celebrates nothing and is un-This day celebrates nothing and is un-This day celebrates nothing and is un-meaning if there was no resurrection of Jesus Christ. On faith in that resurrection the church is itself his-torically built. Within less than thirty years after it was supposed to have taken place, Paul, in his epistle to the Corinthians, written according to the testimony of all critics, before A.D. 60. declared to the Christians in pagan 60, declared to the Christians in pagar Corinth that their Christian faith was built upon this fact, and that if Christ had not risen their faith was vain. Not only the church, but Christianity Not only the church, but Christianity as a historical religion, is founded upon faith in that resurrection. The assurance of immortality expressed in the Easter song, "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory," has appealed to the discouraged and despairing, and given them new life. If Christ did not rise from the dead, the Christian Sunday the Christian Christian Sunday. the Christian church, and Christian civilization are founded on a falsehood, on a delusion, if not on a fraud. To believe that the if not on a fraud. To believe that the whole fabric of Christian civilization is founded on a lie is to believes that in the moral realm causes have no relation to the effects which they produce. It is to relegate us to moral chaos. Christian faith believes in the manifestation of Christ to his disciples after his death as a demonstration of that resurrection which accompanies every dying; first, because faithful, honest and trustworthy men have whole fabric of Christian civilization is founded on a lie is to believes that in the moral realm causes have no relation to the effects which they produce. It is to relegate us to moral chaos. Christian faith believes in the manifestation of Christ to his disciples after his death as a demonstration of that resurrection which accompanies every dying; first, because faithful, honest and trustworthy men have borne witness to such appearances, and, second, because Christian civili-zation, the Christian church and the Christian Sunday are living and per-Christian Sunday are living and perpetual witnesses to such resurrection. Into these two categories fall the evidences which have led the greatest statesmen and jurists—men accustomed to sift and weigh evidence—to accept the visible resurrection of Jesus Christ as one of the best attested facts of anglest history. of ancient history.

Was Christ divine? Our divinity is the same in kind as Christ's divinity because it is the same in kind as God's divinity, because there are not and cannot be, two kinds of divinity. We need not be afraid then to say that Jesus Christ is the supreme product of evolution in human history, for this of evolution in human history, for this simply means that Jesus Christ is the supreme manifestation which history affords of the divine. "I am the door," He says. A door is to push open and go through. He is the door; through Him God enters into humanity. He is the door; through Him humanity enters into God.

He has come into the world in or.

He has come into the world in or-der that we, coming to some knowl-edge and apprehension of the divine divine justice, divine truth, divine life, divine purity, divine love are, may the better enter into that life and be ourselves filled with all the fulness of God. I can no longer, then, as some do, think of the incarnation as a divine intervention in an otherwise uniterior transition. vine intervention in an otherwise undivine life, beginning eighteen centuries ago, lasting thirty-three years and then ceasing, any more than I can think of creation as the production of matter, force, and law, six can think of creation as the production of matter, force, and law, six thousand years ago, which have twice been left to work out their own results with occasional interruptions by the Almighty Creator. All life is God; all force is God. All is of God, except our sin, which is separation from Him, the end of which is death. All goodness, truth, purity, valor, honor, righteousness, all patriotism, all martyrdoms, all patient burden-bearing, all conjugal love, all parental love, all child-love, all friendships and fellowships, all that is noble, true and good, have their inspiration in Him, and are manifestations of Him. All growth nave their inspiration in Him, and are manifestations of Him. All growth in goodness, as all growth in the material universe, has its secret in. His imparted life. And Jesus Christ is the supreme manifestation of God in past history, and the source and inspiration of all that is best in subsequent manifestations of God in Christian history.

"The greatest nation on earth," is the expression made in every civilized country when speaking of the United States

States.

From a little colony in 1776, with its western boundary the Mississippi River, Canada on the north, Spain on the south and the Atlantic washing its eastern shores, it has grown to be a marvelous nation, extending from ocean to ocean, from guif to lakes, and having a population of nearly 80, 200.000.

The American republic is something original in the history of man. Republics flourished in the early centuries. Rome was greatest under the Tribunes; but, like France of today, freedom of thought and action was bought with blood, and liberty was a dream, not a reality. reality.

The incidents of the past few weeks have demonstrated more than ever the stability of our republic. There are men who, at each recurring Presidential election, contend that the country is going to the "eternal bow-wides" if their particular candidate is not given the key to the White House. We hear the same cry every four years, full we have lived through the term of Tayes, when it was said Tilden was counted out, and we are getting along under McKinley, whom many declare was counted in.

There are a certain manlinss and in-

There are a certain manlinss and in-dependence about the American people that seem to astonish the civilized world. We have our battles before election, but the moment the polls are closed all is peace again. The victor closed all is peace again. The victor and vanquished shake hands, and the bitterness of the battle of the ballots is forgotten.

It must have been a revelation to the diplomats of Europe when a bill for $50,000,000 was put through Congress without a dissenting vote, and signed by the President the same day. It showed to the world that the United States is united as one man when it comes to a foreign policy.

throne, a crazy king in power, or to maintain an aristocracy.

The Maine episode may not embroil this country in war. We hope it will be settled without bloodshed. But, be that as it may, the talk of possible consequences has done a world of good to this country. It has caused an outburst of patriotism that can almost be felt. The boys who wore the gray in '61, and the boys in blue, who met them on many a bloody battlefield, are anxious to mingle as brothers under the starry banner, and strike a blow at anyone who dares insuit our country's flag. This little war scare, if it can be so designated, has done more to cement brotherly feeling between the North and South, than the lapse of time since the surrender at Appamattox.

AMERICAN MILLIONS FOR EUROPE.

By a Special Contributor.

HE serious young man with the little note-book has been gather-ing statistics again, and this time he wishes to offer a leaf out of that small volume to the consideration of all patriotic American women His figures are impressive and not dif-ficult to comprehend, and he leads off with the assertion that in the last decade, ending Decemer 31, 1897, a round cade, ending Decemer 31, 1897, a round $50,000,000 has been carried out of the United States by the marriage of our daughters with citizens of foreign countries. Just the sum total of the amount Congress was called upon to appropriate for the defense of our threatened seacoast. Over $20,000,000 has gone to England and France from New York City within the past five years. More in sorrow than in anger, does he arrive at the conclusion that it is from the god of love, and not his majesty of war, we suffer the greatest

it is from the god of love, and not his majesty of war, we suffer the greatest loss of property and the exile of many most valuable inhabitants.

Reckoning from the very first notable international marriage, that of Miss Patterson of Baltimore, with Jerome Bonaparte, this searcher of Cupid's archives has found that not less than 68,000 American-born women have been induced to link their fortunes with those of foreign-born husbands, "acknowledging alleglance," as his notebook formally records, to other governments than that of the United States"—as by her marriage a woman becomes legally a subject of whatever ruler her mate acknowledges, so have these 68,000 women resigned their birthright as Uncle Sam's daughters for titles chiefly.

"Now, of course, when we go back so far as Miss Patterson's rather unhappy marriage," explained the owner of the note-book, "and foot up the dowers that accompanied the hands of these girls who chose to wed beyond the borders of their own land, the sum total of hard, bright, yellow gold carried out of the States foots up to a figure near $100,000,000. This is always taking the very lowest estimate, not including those dowers under $50,000 and naturally overlooking many alliances so quietly made that the most lynx-eyed newspapers failed to 'record them."

One interesting fact still remains eyidenf. Fifty years ago, it was the lynx-eyed newspapers failed to record them."

One interesting fact still remains evident. Fifty years ago, it was the rare American woman who selected a husband of another nationality than her own, and then she did so frankly for purely ambitious motives. Before the civil war, when a millionaire's daughter captured a count or prince, the whole country rang with the news, and sentiment was entirely unacknowledged on either side. The agreement was so much money for a title and position at European courts, and because American fortunes were not so large nor so numerous as at present, the international marriages were not so of frequent. The number of these aliances increases every year, the dots grow larger and larger, and yet I find an increasing per cent, of love matches.

This last is a mitigating circum-

find an increasing per cent, of love matches.

This last is a mitigating circumstance in what every patriotic American is bound to regard as an existing evil. To balance against the rather cold-blooded alliances made in the past five years between American women and a couple of English dukes, a French count and several British earls, who actually knocked down their coronets to the highest bidders, we have Miss Endicott's love match with Joseph Chamberlain, Miss Brown's penniless beauty winning the heart of Lady Aberdeen's brother, and Lady Vernon Harcourt's conquest, by no golden enchantment's of England's greatest political leader.

Still, money remains the great link

marquis never flinched, and at the proper time both bride and dower were forthcoming, though the three remaining daughters went penniless to their untitled American husbands. Of all this impressive amount of money that has passed across the water. England has received more than one-half the total and more women from New York State and city have made foreign marriages than from any other part of the country.

The bitterest pill, however, that this deliver among figures has rolled up for American digestion is the assertion, based on personal investigation, that with rare exceptions, those women who marry out of the States ususelly resign, and in too brief a time, all identity with and affection for the land of their birth. It is only necessary to meet American wives of foreign men to realize how closely the marriage tie binds them to the country of their adoption, how rapidly they assume the foreigners reverence for those in high places, the recognition of class, and accept the manners and customs that their fathers or brothers would resist to their last breath.

But if England, as the note-book records, has got the llon's share of our American millions, France comes next on the list of benificiaries. Germany third, and it is pleasant to find that Spain has drawn few prizes, indeed from among our rich and pretty girls. It is true enough that of all titled Europeans, the Spaniard is least inclined to make a mercenary or an alien marriage, while the English and Frenchmen are the most aggressive in this particular.

In Paris, indeed, there has recently been opened a matrimonial bureau, where a careful record is made of the movements of those rich American women, maids or widows, who are traveling on the continent. At the bureau a careful estimate of the young lady's fortune, a history of her family, etc, etc., can be secured and assistance received, with a view to securing introductions to desirable individuals.

Rich Americans to the Parisian fortune-hunter do not, however, simply imply women from the United States

People who bloat up and feel distressed after eating will read with interest the experience of a painter whose shop is in Machias, Me. Just how this painter was cured of those ailments is told in the subjoined letter which he himself wrote: years I have had trouble with my stomach. I suppose I brought it on by eating irregularly and too fast; but then, after stopping that, the trouble still hung on, and I should have it now but for Ripans Tabules. They fixed me up all right. I used to bloat up and feel distressed after each meal. Then I would be giddy, and my head felt dull and large, and I suppose it was the gas that caused it by fermentation. I could eat only a few things, and not very much of them. But the trouble is all gone now, and I am feeling first-rate. Ripans Tabules will knock indigestion all to pieces. The first time I saw the Tabules, a traveling man at Clare's Hotel gave me two to try.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR TITE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the drecents cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHERICAL CORPARY, No. 19 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

ONE OF NATURE'S STRANGEST PRANKS.

By a Special Contributor.

HERE are living in Michigan today two men so alike in form and feature that their wives have apart. For this reason their lives have been filled with incidents that it is been filled with incidents that it is the privilege of very few persons in the world to have experienced, and every day adds to the queer happenings. These men are William Hisey of Sparta, Mich., and James Hisey of Yale, Mich. Each is in the milling business, and, oddly enough, each has achieved the same degree of success in life. It is often the case where nature plays so queer a prank as to make children exactly alike, that as the years come to them and environment differs, the faces of the two become dissimilar to such an extent as to render it the faces of the two become dissimilar to such an extent as to render it comparatively easy to distinguish one from the other. In the case of the Hiseys, however, the lines of their lives have fallen in almost similar places, and, their tastes being largely the same, their characters have developed in much the same fashion. The result of all this is that the resemblance of childhood is just as strongly evident in the years of maturity. The following narratives, written by the twins, are unvarnished statements of fact. They are given just as the writers penned them. The first is that of William Hisey of Sparta.

WILLIAM HISEX'S STORY.

"My twin brother and I look so much

"My twin brother and I look so much alike that not one person out of a thousand can tell us apart. We were born near Stouffville, Can., on a farm. We were always together, both at home and at school, always averaged the same in our studies, always dressed alike and weighed the same. We were exactly the same height, our voices were precisely alike, and, to make the resemblance more perfect so far as other people were concerned, we each had a peculiar cough.

'hubby' when she saw him.

"We have had three children. Our little boy was 7 years old when he died, and he would often make mistakes when my brother and I were together, for since we have been men we have dressed alike, just as we did when we were boys. My little girl was 6 years old before she could tell which of us was her papa when we were together. Each of us would say, 'Come to papa,' and she would have to look and study to find out which was really papa, and then would sometimes make a mistake.

"My wife had an aunt living near us."

and then would sometimes make a mistake.

"My wife had an aunt living near us, who had known me for four or five years. My brother came to visit us, and we all went over to see the aunt. My brother went into the house first, and introduced me as the stranger. My aunt inquired how I liked it in Michigan, and about things in general, and did not know the truth at all. At the same time I had a bad tooth, and went into an adjoining room to get something, when my brother and I changed places. When the dentist came out again, and started to fix the tooth, you can imagine his astonishment to find no hollow tooth there at all.

"Both my brother and myself are afficted with rheumatism in our feet, knees hands and shoulden."

"Both my brother and myself are afflicted with rheumatism in our feet, knees, hands and shoulders. In the winter of 1892 we went to Hot Springs, Ark., for treatment. The doctors there made many mistakes in making examinations and even the colored attendants in the bath-houses would often declare, when one of us asked attention, that he had already been attended to. A curious fact about this rheumatism is that while we are two of a family of twelve children, we are the only ones afflicted with this trouble.

was to learn the miller's trade, and we have both gratified it. We remained at home until 1873, when we went to the town of Ingersoll, Ont., to learn the miller's trade. We began work the same day, but in different mills, and there was not a soul in the town who could tell us apart. Farmers would go to one mill and then to the other and would be puzzled to find what seemed to be the same miller in two different places, each of whom told them he had been there at the same time.

"When we went out in the evening in company, we had more fun than I can tell vou. Even our most intimate friends in Ingersoil could not tell us apart. It would often happen that each would take a young lady to a party. After we were all in one room, neither of the girls could tell which one of us she had come with. Often we would make some excuse and leave the ladies we were with for a moment and change partners. The girls would not know it, and one of them would talk on a subject to me which I knew nothing about, as it was something she had been discussing with my brother. I would carry on the conversation as best I could, and then I would let the girl be as sweet to me as she wanted to. After a while I would tell her of the change.

"In 1877 I left Ingersell and settled down at Memphis, Mich. I soon got acquainted with the young people, and after being there more than a year, became engaged to a young lady. A few weeks before the wedding, my brother paid me a visit, and for the life of her my sweetheart could not tell us epart at all, nor could her people. When she wanted to talk over the arrangements for the wedding, she would talk with my brother almost as often as she did with me. She used to try to make me promise not to let her make such mistakes, and in some way let her know which was which. But it was too much fun for us.

In the matter of his experiences James Hisey tells much that his brother has already related. In the course of James Hisey tells much that his brother has already related. In the course of his narrative, however, he says:

"When we were born the nurse tied a string on one of us in order to tell which was born first. They say William was born first, but we do not know much about that ourselves. I have been told that instances of such close resemblances are rare, even with babies. There was a time when our parents could hardly tell us apart, and when one of us was guilty of any mischief both were whipped, in order that the guilty one should not escape.

"In school our teachers could never tell us apart, and the only way they could distinguish us at all was to have us sit in different parts of the room, and they never were sure whether we were in our right seats. Many times we have danced in the same set and changed partners and back again without the fact ever becoming known.

Often we would go into a room together. One of us would leave the room and none could tell which of us had gone out. When the missing one came back all that could be done was to guess which had been away.

"It was not long after my brother's marriage that I decided to follow his example, and when it came time for the ceremony the situation was funny. Although the minister had never seen my brother until the wedding day, and he knew me well, he could not for the life of him tell which it was he was to marry. My brother was my best man, and it is an actual fact that the minister could not commence the ceremony until he was told which was James Hisey. He said he did not dare to for fear of making a mistake.

"My brother and myself have the same tastes and in everything but politics think alike. Our dispositions, actions and voices are the same. I think we are just as much alike today as we were the day we were born.

"JAMES HISEY."

If any man will come after me, let him deny imself and take up his cross daily and follow ne.—[Luke ix, 23.

Here is, 22.

ERE is the "Great Christian Daily," issued every morning, full of good news and "grace for well-timed help." Christ divides life into time periods of twenty-four hours each. He locks the door that leads back into yesterday, and he locks tre door that leads out into tomorrow, and he commands us to live busy and door that leads out into tomorrow, and he commands us to live busy and happy within the limits of today.

I learn this blessed philosophy from Paul's observation that we should "forget the things behind," coulped with the Master's teaching, "Be not anxious for tomorrow, and has added exhortation to "take up the cross daily." Happy the man who lives a daily life! Happy the man who lives on the installment plan, and pays his debts of duty and expects his gifts of grace day by day according to the Masters' wtenty-four-hour time-divisions!

1. This truth is the secret of success. It is as valuable in secular affairs as in spiritual. If one-third of me is at work trying to repair the irreparable yesterday, and another third of me is busy with tomorrow not yet arrived, there is only one-third of me left for the real life and actual duties of today; and failure is the inevitable result. To be won away from fidelity to present duty, by attention to things far distant, is the most frequent cause of failure in sacred and in secular life.

Jesus does not teach that we should forget the wisdom of yesterday, or despise the demands of tomorrow, but that we should not let these anxieties occupy and pre-occupy us so as to destroy today's efficiency. When the whole man is given to daily duty day by day, we gather the best fruits of yesterday and make the best possible provision for tomorrow. The only way to repair yesterday is to do your duty today, and that is the only way to provide for tomorrow. The only real life there is is that of today; all the rest is in large measure fictitious and false. This daily plan of living gives us good cheer to our work. It is immensely discouraging to look at life as a whole, to consider it in the totals of its work and its woes. The idea of taking up my cross and walking under its weight for ten or twenty or thirty years—why, the thought is paralyzing! It would get so heavy in that time that I would stagger and fall under the load. I look at the task in utter despair.

But when I adopt the daily plan of living, and practice the Master's twenty-four-hour time-divisions, it all becomes easy and inviting. I know I can carry my cross from now until tonight. Then I will go to sleep for eight or nine hours; and sleep abolishes duty and work. When I arise tomorrow morning I have, at the outside limit, only fifteen or sixteen hours more of cross-bearing and consistent living is the peculiar accomplishment of Christian faith. I do not see how a man who assumes entire responsibility for all he is and all he does can free himself from of today. They do not worry with and fret over yesterdays and tomorrows; they get all there is out of today and leave the past and future to take caré of themselves.

Children have blissful ability for forgetting trouble, and delightful incapacity for anticipating it. The child not only knows how to get into the kingdom of heaven, but also how to get along in the kingdom. Of course, they have their little vexations, but they also have amazing talent for filinging these things aside and digging nuggets of joy. It is when we get older and begin to worry about yesterdays and tomorrows that we get miserable. How foolish it is to be forever miserable because we can't be bappy! Just go on and be content, and more and more of happiness will come. Only in Him who said "Except ye become as little chikiren" can we have a child's sweet content. I can manage today's toils and cares and sorrows; but when I pile up yesterday's on today's and put tomorrow's burdens on top of that, and go about bearing a three-story load of troubles, it is then that the heart is crushed. I must turn over my past, which I cannot mend, to the pardoning mercy of God; I must commit my future, which I cannot mend, to the pardoning mercy of God; I must commit my future, which I cannot avenge, to the providing love of God; and then as a child I can make today the bright and cosy home of my content.

Like voyagers on a river, we can no more command the past or the future than we can change the course of the stream behind us and before us; we must make friends with the kindly currents and float on in trust. I know that today's trouble will not break my heart; I know I can live till tonight in reasonable comfort. Tomorrow I have only ten or fifteen hours more, and that is not so bad; and beause it is not so bad, it is tolerably good, and I get a bit comfortable before I know it, and a little practice gives me permanent content. All this is possible only as we practice the Master's time-divisions of twenty-four-hour periods of living.

manent content. All this is possible only as we practice the Master's time-divisions of twenty-four-hour periods of living.

3. There is just one other time-division in the New Testament. "On the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store." We are to adopt the daily idea of receiving, but we are to practice a weekly idea in giving.

That is a very gracious arrangement, Would it not greatly bless the world if each of us, every Sunday morning, would lay by a reasonable share of his prosperity for the sweet ministries of human love? Charity would then be abundant for every need, and the Lord's work would quickly compass the world. The plus of our week's prosperity would fill up the minus of some brother's daily needs to the completion of content. These time-divisions, daily and weekly, groove into each other, and if universally practiced, the whole earth would be happy.

Let us remember, then, whether of trial or suffering, of drudgery or responsibility, of hard work or burdening care, that it is but "one day at a time." And let us also remember that in each and every one of these days ile opportunities which must be taken advantage of on the instant, or they are gone forever.

Time was, is past; thou canst not it recall. Time is, thou hast; improve the measure small.

Time future is not, and may never be; Time present is the only time for these.

Time future is not, and may never be; Time present is the only time for thee. Q+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0

THE ASCENT OF MAN. The power of Christ's redemption is to restore in man the divine image: Is "to renew him in knowledge after the image of Him who created him." This is a divinely-ordained ascent. THE HAPPY FUTURE. Religious zeal and devotion will beget one a future of untold grandeur and happiness. Finally, when Andross stretched out his hand to take it, the candles were suddenly extinguished, shouts arose from a large crowd outside and numbers pressed into the room. Order was soon restored, however, and the candles relighted, but the charter could not be found. Capt. Wadsworth had skillfully borne it away in the darkness. He hid it in the silent oak in front of the mansion of Hon. Samuel Wyllys, a magistrate of the community.

On a stormy night in August, 1854, the oak was prostrated. It was eatimated to be more than 600 years old. William Penn's treaty with the Indians was made under the spreading branches of an elm tree on the banks of the Delaware. It was not for lands, but for peace and friendship.

"We meet," said Penn, "in the broad pathway of good faith and good will; no advantage shall be taken on either side, but all shall be openness and love, I will not call you children, for parents sometimes chide their children too severely; nor brothers only, for brothers differ. At Babylon, L. I., there is now in existence a tree upon which an evil spell was also cast. It stands on the Highby property. Some years ago Tom Paine, a noted atheist, sat under its branches, and, the story tells us, that since that day it has never raised itself toward heaven, but spread itself over the earth.

"I heard it was there," he cried, "but I wouldn't believe until I had seen it with my own eyes."

Then, turning to a curious group which had surrounded him, he exclaimed: "My friends, Guilford Jackson is no more dead than you are. I am Guilford Jackson, and, except for a lame leg and a rather disfigured face. I am as well as I was when I left Flushing in the early 60's."

One by one Jackson's old friends and schooffellows recognized him by sundry signs and tokens, which left no doubt of his identity.

JACKSON'S STORY.

On investigation it appeared that, at Chancellorsville, instead of being killed outright, he had, been hadly wounded. He fell close to the banks of the Rappahannock and managed to crawl, with great pain and loss of blood, out of the direct line of pursuit. For many hours he lay concealed, and suffering great agony, in the long grass. On May 4 a negro found him and conveyed him in a mule wagon to an abandoned plantation near by.

The whole countryside was in the hands of the Confederates, and Jackson dreaded capture. At first he feared that his right leg, in which he had been severely wounded, would have to be amputated, but thanks to the fact that the negro who had found him a hopeless cripple. Making his way north, he practiced his trade of car-penter for some time in Wheeling, W. Va., eventually settling down in Greensburg, Pa., where he became a sufficiently influential citizen.

THE PILGRIMAGE TO FLUSHING. Happening one day to see an account of the soldiers' monument in his native village of Flushing, he sent an inquiry to that place asking for the names of such of his old friends who had been killed in the war. To his astorishment he found that his own name appeared on the list.

A curiosity to see his own monument prompted him to journey eastward, with the result already described. The name could not be chiselled off the granite, without seriously impairing its general symmetry. As a result it has been permitted to remain.

Since his first visit, Mr. Jackson has never failed to return for a look at the obelisk at least once a year. He generally arrives in Flushing on some such holiday as Memorial day, the Fourth of July, Washington's birth-day; when he lays a commemorative wreath against the slab upon which his name has been cut. HOW RAY MORDY SAVED THE SHIP. [FROM A REGULAR CONTRIBUTOR.]

AR forward in the bows of an old wooden training-ship which lay in a great navy yard, two boys sat one night just before the hour when the bo'sun would pipe to hammocks. Near them were other boys, many of them, in apprentice uniform, laughing and larking, but these two sat alone near an old-fashioned port, and their near an old-fashloned port, and their faces were woefully downcast.

"Ray," said the bigger-looking boy, although there was little apparent difference in their ages, "Ray, two weeks of this torture has been enough for me. The schoolmaster struck me again today, and the quartermaster called me a lubberly farmer's boy, because I couldn't catch on at once to the trick of the knot he wanted me to tie, and I had a row with that big brute trick of the knot he wanted me to tie, and I had a row with that big brute Hopper, and got my ears boxed by a marine for fighting, when Hopper got nothing, though it was his fault—bullying. It's this way every day. I'm sick of it. I'm going to desert."

Ray Mordy pressed his lips tight, and did not answer at once He was a little bit of a chap, barely 15, and small for his age. Yet the doctir would not have passed him if he had not been sound and strong. If at the first glance you would have called him delicate, a second would have suggested to you that he was wiry and tough. His face, however, was most unattractive, pale and large-nosed and thin-lipped. His eyes was against him, and, perhaps more than that, a taciturnity which was natural to him, but which, combined with his looks, gained him the name of being sullen. Never did he excite a quarrel, but never, either, did he take an insult, or accept a blow without resenting it. That mattered little. He got the name on the ship of being of an ill disposition, and his life became a most unhappy one. And as it was with the apprentices, so it grew to be with the officers.

"I'll fight it out," he thought, and thus the more blackly he was looked upon, and the more gruffly he was ordered about, the more determined he faced the future.

upon, and the more gruiny ne was ordered about, the more determined he faced the future.

II.

A few horrible months passed away on board the training-ship, and at last, a new battleship being placed in commission, Ray was drafted with a number of others to make up her complement of hands. His reputation followed him. It always does. Through the weeks of cruising which took them to a foreign station, cruising which he had so long looked forward to, the boy's life was much the same. If there was any particularly disagreeable task it was given to Mordy; if there was any doubt as to who had bungled a job Mordy was blamed. If there was any outle a stown of the same to regard the same to regard the same to resent ment, Mordy was, as a matter of fact, in many scrimmages.

The great steel-clad warship was sent to the China station and became the flagship of the fleet. At that time there were continual rumors of wars, and the few American vessels came together in one harbor, their crews filled with intense excitement. The newcomer had brought with her a very large store of ammunition, gun cotton and dynamite, which were stowed away in the magazines, and were in part to be distributed among the other ships. So it happened that when all were at the rendezvous, the gun divisions were set to work to overhaul these magazines and "break out" the ammunition needed.

Ray was working with his division. Training had done much for him; he was now as smart at drill and work as the others, but while their efforts were applauded or encouraged, young Mordy's were overlooked. You see, he had a ready been in trouble, and the ship's captain himself had sternly reprimanded and warned him. Ray had run into one of the cooks and upset a pan of baked beans, and the captain had chanced to see it. It was a pure accident, but the boy had no friend in the cook, who accused him loudly of doing the mischief for pure spite. "How is it," said the captain, angrily, to the boy, "that I have more complaints of you than any one else on the ship? Let me charged. It seems you are worthless, sir!"

Disheartened, alarmed at the threat, Ray was working silently and gloomly. An officer was superintending the work in the magazine, which was dark as pitch. To light it a gunner's mate was leaning over the hatch shouting directions to those below, who were, with block and tackie, hoisting cans of powder and so on to the main deck. Ray and that same Hopper who had helped to drive Ray's chum, Tom, to desertion, were assisting the gunner's mate and guiding the tackle as the ammunition came up. There was a loing pause while the men in the pit of the magazine were gone away aft to bring more cans to the hook. Hopper began, being a big, coarse lout, to mock young Mordy about his morning's accident and to taunt him with the captain's threat. "Yahl milkface," said he, "why cans to the hook. Hopper began, being a big, coarse lout, to mock young Mordy about his morning's accident and to taunt him with the captain's threat.

"Yah! milkface," said he, "why didn't you desert when you had a chance? I told you you'd never be any good in the navy. I'd rather desert any day than be fired out."

Ray said nothing, but his eyes glared. His heart was already full, and he could ill bear any more.

"What'll they say on the farm, nosey?" his tormentor went on, "when their sailor boy comes home in disgrace? I bet your mother will spank you, et? Oh, mamma!"

It was too much. Ray's fist shot out, and Hopper's nose met it fairly. The officer and gunner's mate had been engaged looking into the magazine, and did not observe the incident, but before Hopper could retaliate a stern voice made them all look up. There stood the captain, arrived just in time to see the apparently wilfull blow.

"Mordy again," said he. "You seem a regular firebrand, young man. Lieutenant, please see that the master-atarms takes charge of this boy, and puts in the brig. I'll attend to his case."

Ray turned ghastly white. The captain meant, then, to fullfill his threat! Farewell, all hopes and dreams of a bright future. He would have to go back to the farm disgraced, dismissed, dishonorably discharged. The captain was turning away, but as he did so, Hopper, unable to restrain his joy at this quick revenge for the blow, began a dance of triumph. He took a step or two, and in his blind delight, his foot struck a rope. He fell sidewise upon the gunner's mate, who, in saving himof going to sea? Ray," he whispered. "let's desert first chance. Will you come?"

Ray looked steadily down the dim length of the ship to where the officer of the deck paced on the quarterdeck. "Leshan't desert," he said slowly, at last. "They may kill me first. It's a disgrace for life. I've had a fight every day and been licked every time, but I'll whip 'em yet. The schoolmaster's as hard on me as you, and I'm awkward, I know, at signaling and splicing, and everything else. But I'll learn. Lay low, Tom. Our turn will come some day. Anyhow, I won't go back and confess myself beaten, at home."

The pipe of the bo'sun whistled shrilly through the ship. In an instant the boys were scattered, and two or three leaped into the nettings and began to throw down the laced hammocks to their comrades. It was done quickly and without disturbance, and soon, the hammocks slung, each in its appointed place, the apprentices were swinging in them, their troubles over for one more day. Tom soon sank his sorrow in sleep, but Ray Mordy's grave gray eyes remained open for a long time, and his ears heard, throughout the greater part of the night, the clang of the ship's bell every half hour.

Two days afterward Tom got a chance, when sent ashore with a party, and deserted, but Ray remained to fight it out.

Ray Mordy's unfortunately ugly face

"It's burning still," he gasjed, "and the flame of the wick is right next a can of powder!"

Such a moment has been sufficient to turn men's hair white. What the mate meant was that the heat from the burning wick would explode the powder in a minute, and that explosion would spread to all the gun cotton and dynamite, and hundreds of other powder cans in the magazine. Those around realized with the swift intuition bred of despair, that they stood on the brink of destruction; that in a few seconds the monster manof-war would lie at the bottom of the harbor a shattered wreck. All unconscious of what had happened, the men below were still aft at their work, too far away to reach the lamp in time.

They looked at each other, and suddenly Hopper dashed to the side of the ship with a yell.

"Save yourselves!" he screamed. We'll be blown up!" and overboard he dived. But as he ran there darted past him a slight, pale-faced boy, who uttered no cry, but, regardless of the horrible fate awaiting an instant's delay, with wonderful nimbleness, threw himself over the steel side of the hatch, grasped the hoisting tackle, slipped down it and stood beside the burning lamp. Instantly he seized it and extinguished the light, and with his left hand grasped the now hot can of powder, while with his right he took a firm grip on the rope.

"Haul up!" he shouted, and the captain himself was the first to lay on to the tackle and haul. Up came Ray Mordy, white as death, but cool. He gained the deck; he dashed past the captain with little ceremony and on to the poop whence he heaved into the sea the heated explosive

"Three cheers for Slim Jim! Three and a tiger!"

They gave them with a will, and Ray, coming down the ladder from the poop deck, paused, and tears of relieved pride leaped to his eyes, as he saw for the first time in his apprenticeship the flush of friendly admiration on the faces of his comrades as they looked on him smillingly. But the captain stepped to meet him and held out his hand.

"I thank you." he said "Let me see you at once in my cabin."

Ray followed him and the captain took him to the admiral, who shook hands with him again, and the two old officers questioned him kindly and closely, until Ray's. silent and shy tongue talked freely, and he told them all his troubles

"My lad," said the captain, "you have been misunderstood, and in the name of the ship's company I'll promise you to make all the reparation we can. As for me. I promise you a warrant officer's sword as soon as you are old enough to wear it."

The winter of '96.7 Mr. Thorne spent at Lafayette College at Easton, Pa., to prepare himself for the position in the Pennsylvania Coal Company that he now holds. This position has taken him to West Pittston, near Scranton, where he is in authority over a number of men. Few would recognize in the grave man who governs his men so well the former merry favorite at Yale. Undoubtedly his training as captain on the football field has helped him to hold the attention and interest of these men with whom he now comes in contact.

His life at West Pittston is in strong contrast to his college existence, and that of his home in New York, At 6 o'clock every morning he is about overseeing and helping the men in the mines. He says he has no longer time to shave. A short time ago when he returned to New Haven for a reunion of the famous secret society to which belongs, "Skull and Bones," his friends found that he had grown quite a formidable beard, which was the cause of much good-natured comment.

A New National Park

EYOND a brief telegraphic report from Washington that the President had signed a bill creation of the Pine Mountain and Zaca Lake reservation in Southern California, nothing has been said in the press of this section regarding a most important piece of legislation, which creates a new na-tional park, covering 1,144,000 acres of land in the counties of Los Angeles, Banta Barbara, Ventura and San Luis Obispo. This park is nearly half as large as the county of Los Angeles.

The reservation thus created em-braces a wild and picturesque section tain peaks rising 8000 feet, with cafions between, yet unexplored. One may stand on the top of Stow's Peak and look straight down a perpendicular depth of over 2000 feet. Springs of ice cold water are found in the pine timber, and in places on the very top of the mountains. These are typical summer resorts.

"The Ventura and Ojai Valley River road runs to within three miles of the park at Nordhoff, at which place parties can secure saddle horses, pack animals and guides, if desired."

Following are the official boundaries of the new park, as given in the President's proclamation:
"Beginning at the northwest corner of fractional township 12 north, range 30 west, San Bernardino base and meridian; thence southerly along the the proper United States Land Office, or upon which any valid settlement has been made pursuant to law, and the statutory period within which to make entry or filing of record has not expired, and all mining claims duly located and held according to the laws of the United States and rules and regulations."

It is also provided that the above

It is also provided that the above exception shall not apply to any particular tract of land—where the entry settler or claimant confinues to comply with the law under which the entry filed, settlement or location was made. Warning is given to all persons not to enter or to make settlement upon the tract of land reserved by the proclamation.

tract of land reserved by the processina-tion.

About twenty-four miles south lof the south line of this new park is the north line of the San Gabriel reserva-tion, which extends to the line of the Southern Pacific Rasilway in Soledad Cañon. An application has been made for a reservation of this gap, which would then give a continuous line of government reservation from the north line of the Pine Ridge reservation on to a point south of San Jacinto. About are: P. Davin, on Boyle Heights, not running during the past year; J. M. Gamble, at Garvanza; H. Jensen, Western avenue; Kavanaugh, West Washington street; Shrader, West Pico street. The output of these four yards is about two million five hundred thousand per year. They employ about thirty men, mostly Chinamen.

Pasadena has a good brick yard, owned by the Simons Brick and Contract Company, cousins of the Simons of Los Angeles. The output of this yard is equal to from seven to eight million, but they only run out about three. Santa Monica, Long Beach, Santa Ana, San Bernardino, San Diego and Ventura all have yards, but most of them are quite small.

The combined output of the yards at Los Angeles and vincinty is about thirty million, but this can easily be doubled, should occasion demand it, with the present plants.

Following is a list of the main buildings erected during the past year, or in the process of construction, and an estimate of amount of brick used in each: Homer Laughlin building, 1,000,000; new Stimson Block, 1,500,000 to 2,000,000; Prost building, 400,000: Oxnard sugar factory, 2,000,000; Alamitos sugar factory annex, 200,000: Maler & Zobelein Bottling Works, 150,000; Wan Nuys, 750,000; Henry Martz, 1,000,000; McDonald flour mill, 250,000; East Side Brewery, 600,000.

ments for an increased water supply. The present water supply of the Vine-land irrigation district has been found inadequate, and the board of directors has decided to enlarge the present capacity of seventy-five inches to 175 inches. Plans and specifications are now being prepared for the construction of two wells and a pumping plant with a capacity of 100 inches. A survey for a high-pressure pipe line has been begun.

It is proposed by the directors of the Vineland Irrigation District, which was formed under the Wright Act, to erect a reservoir of sufficient capacity for the needs of the district, on the lands of the district at its extreme northern border. The two wells and the pumping station will be located at the townsite, about two and three-quarter miles from the reservoirs, to which the water will be pumped by power furnished by the San Gabriel Electric Power Company, and from which it will be distributed throughout the district by means of gravity pipes. It is estimated that this addition to the Vineland irrigation system will cost not less than $20,000, and will be in operation three months hence. The two wells will be about three hundred feet deep, at which depth a copious supply of water is to be had.

The Santa Monica Signal says: "A contract has been entered into between the West Los Angeles Water Company and the Excelsior Wooden Pipe Company of San Francisco for the construction of a wooden-pipe line from a point on their present twenty-inch steel pipe, about one-half a mile west of Hollywood to the boundary line of the grounds of the Soldiers' Home; also a reservoir of about one hundred from the home grounds. The estimated length of the entire pipe line is about thirty-nine thousand feet, of which there will be about tunnel."

Profitable Creameries.

Profitable Creameries.

GOOD reports continue to be received of the profitable business that is being done by the various creameries throughout Southern California, the number of which is being constantly added to. The Downey Champion gives the following information regarding the latest of the three creameries at that place: three creameries at that place:

"Downey has three separating plants—W. W. Cooke's Star Creamery plants—W. W. Cooke's Star Creamery, the Coöperative Creamery and Bingham's, the latest and youngest. The Champion reporter dropped in there the other day, and was surprised to see the substantial evidences of increased business. The building has been enlarged, and the plant added to. Through the courtesy of Mr. Wallnee Randall, the manager, every detail of the business was shown us. About 6000 pounds of milk a day is handled. Most of this is separated, and the cream shipped to Los Angeles, while the skim milk goes back to the Bricks THE brick trade in Los Angeles during the past two years has been good notwithstanding the closing out of a number of yards which opened up during the boom, making the numup during the boom, making the number greatly in excess of any probable need in this vicinity for years to come. The four leading brick yards of this city have a central office at No. 125 West Second street. While their accounts are kept under one management, each yard is separate and entirely independent. These four yards are as follows: follows:

The City Brick Company, Thomas Goss, president, and A. A. Hubbard, secretary. This company has two con-tinuous kilns, with one Potts machine and one Quaker.

The Capital Steam Brick Works, Ed.
Simons, proprietor, has one continuous kiln, with a Quaker machine,

The Seventh-street Brick Yard, R. G. Simons, proprietor, has one continuous kiln and a Quaker machine.

The Inglewood Brick Yard, D. J. Houlahan, proprietor, has one continuous kiln and two Quaker machines.

There are two other machine-made brick yards in the city, one owned by C. Paye on Stevenson avenue, with a Martin machine, and that of T. F. Joyce, who has a continuous and a Chief machine. The latter yard is not now running. The Monarch Brick Company has not been running for some time, having got into financial difficulties.

Five of the above named yards are

Five of the above named yards are using steam and one is installing electricity, probably the first on the Coast to run machines by this power.

These five yards employ about one hundred and seventy-five men, all white. The improved machinery calls for intelligent workmen. The output of each kiln is about 8,000,000 per annum, but each is only run to about one-half capacity, or about 4,000,000 per annum. The output of the first four yards for the last eleven months has been 15, 000,000, and they have about 7,000,000 on hand.

ranch to fatten hogs and feed calves. About fifty gallons of cream is thus obtained. The separator is generally speeded to 5600 revolutions a minute, and yet this tremendous velocity is hardly noticeable so smoothly the bowl turns on its well-oiled bearings. Separation is facilitated by warming the milk a little; in this instance it is not convenient, so they increase the rotation to 6000, and the same result is obtained—perfect separation of fat. "Besides furnishing the Los Angeleños with something to put in their coffee, Mr. Bingham is furnishing something for the babies as well, something which, while not absolutely pure, as the baking powder ads say, comes mighty near it. That something is pasteurized milk, not only good for infants, but grown folks, as well. They ship 150 gallons of it every day, and are steadily increasing their output. Some day the great public will get educated up to the point of demanding that all the milk they use shall be thus treated. We sampled some and found it delicious, although a trifle sweeter than ordinary milk. While this process does not destroy all micro organisms, as in sterilization, it does destroy all vegetative germs, and has not the boiled taste developed when the temperature approaches 212, the point of sterilization. The process of pasteurizing is this: Eighteen five-gallon cans of milk are half-submerged in a tank of water, steam is then turned on until the water approaches 150 deg.; here it stands from fifteen to thirty minutes, when the cans are emptied into a trough, with a perforated bottom; under the trough is an areator and cooler, a vertical fluted sheet of metal, like an exaggerated washboard, only thicker, through which water is constantly circulating. The milk runs down on both sides of this and is again canned and shipped to market.

"The creameries do not buy milk, they buy cream. And to find out how water is constantly circulating. The milk runs down on both sides of this and is again canned and shipped to market.

"The creameries do not buy milk, they buy cream. And to find out how much cream is in the milk they subject all milk weekly to the Babcock test. This is quite delicate. Imagine a zinc wash tub capable of rapid rotation by a hand crank; imagine twenty little long-necked bottles with graduated per cent. marks on the neck, each per cent. divided into fifths; then these twenty bottles or so are arranged in a double circle in this tub, each flask swinging in a metal holder—and there you have it. About 17 cubic centimeters of milk—a good-sized wine-glass full—is put in each bettle. Mr. Smith's milk is put in one. Mr. Jones's in another, and so on, and labeled. Then an equal quantity of sulphuric acid is added. Then the crank is turned, the tub revolves, the little bottles swing outward as the speed increases until their slender necks lie flat, the acid and milk mingles and the acid cuts loose every trace of fat. This takes about ten minutes. Hot water is finally added and the cream floats free, 3, 4 or 5 per cent, as the case may be, and if Mr. Smith's bottle shows 5 per cent, of cream and Mr. Jones's only 4, why Mr. Smith gets a quarter more for his milk, weight for weight, than his neighbor. These tests are called composite tests, from the fact that they represent samples of milk taken daily and placed in one bottle, each customer's milk by itself."

Another creamery—that of Philip Raab, known as the Oak Leaf, at Bolsa, in Orange county—the butter from which was awarded first prize at the Dairymen's Association Exposition in Los Angeles in September, 1896, is thus described by the Santa Ana Blade:

"The creamery is now turning out about three hundreds pounds of butter."

1896, is thus described by the Santa Ana Blade:

"The creamery is now turning out about three hundreds pounds of butter per day. The scarcity of feed has caused a decrease in the flow of milk and the creamery is not running up to its full capacity. The price paid for milk the month of February, was $1.06 per 100 pounds, of milk-testing 4 per cent. butter fat, which is considered a fair price. The creamery is an institution of untold benefit to the prosperous little settlement of Bolsa, and one to which the residents should lend a hearty encouragement and support. It is a home institution and gives employment to a large number of its home people. The running expenses of the plant are between $200 and $200 per month, and otherword of this finds tis way into the pockets of farners of the neighborhood, and besides this, its distributes in the comunity on an average of $1500 per month for milk. Thus it will be seen that it is an enterprise for mean importance." of no mean importance."

Reference has been made in this department to the condensed-milk factory at Buena Park, just across the line of Los Angeles, in Orange county. The Orange County Plaindealer gives the following interesting facts, showing what one live and progressive man can do for a community:

"About two years ago C. F. Bixby became the owner of the Condensed Milk factory at Buena Park. He soon organized a stock concern known as the Pacific Creamery Company, from money some of the heavy capitalists

ing about 15,000 pounds of milk per day, and this makes about 150 cases of the finished product. As each case contains 48 cans, it will be seen that this is more than 7000 cans per day, or about 2,500,000 per annum. This finds a ready sale, not only on this Coast, but as far east as Galveston. In fact, there are orders ahead for two months' product.

ready sale, not only on this Coast, but as far east as Galveston. In fact, there are orders ahead for two months' product.

"The plant is lighted by electricity, and the steam power is furnished from two oil-burning boilers of 75 and 60 horse-power respectively.

"The expenses of this great establishment are over $10,000 monthly, a greater part of which is spent right at home. Los Alamitos sugar is used in large quantities in the manufacture of the sweet condensed milks, of which the company makes several brands.

"A miniature rallway runs through the building, furnishing an easy method of handling the various products. Steam machinery is used wherever it can be employed.

"A visit to this little town is a revelation to one who does not know what this factory is doing, as about eighty farmers haul their milk here, and these, with forty factory employés, make it look lively in the morning. Some of you Anaheim men should see it then. It would make you hustle to get a cannery and a shoe factory for yourselves.

"It is an object lesson on what a bright hustling man like Mr. Bixby can do."

Dairymen in the San Jacinto country are making money. The Winchester Dairymen in the San Jacinto country are making money. The Winchester Recorder says:

"It is the unanimous verdict of those who have tried it that alfalfa raised on irrigated land and fed to good dairy cows is one of the surest and best investments open to a man with small capital.

cows is one of the surest and best mestments open to a man with small capital.

"One of the largest patrons of the Winchester creamery reports that his cows netted him a clear profit of 40 per cent. on the investment in the last year. Others have done equally well, and it is a significant fact that not a discouraged dairyman can be found in this valley.

"H. D. Halstead, who lives in the east end of the district, raises alfalfa and devotes a part of his time to dairying, reports that the income from his cows averages $6.80 a month for each cow. As the cost of none of them exceeded $40, the cows will earn enough to pay for themselves in less than six months. He is convinced that dairying is about the most reliable 'stand by' the farmer can have. If scrub cows, instead of thoroughbreds, are kept, and are given such short rations that they lose flesh in fighting for an existence, the result will be disappointing, but with the exercise of the common sense that is necessary to keep any business out of the hands of the sheriff, dairying pays handsomely."

The San Luis Rey creamery, in San Diego county, now receives $500 pounds of milk daily, and there is a likelihood that the amount will be increased to 4000 pounds soon.

Santa Ana Growing.

Ana Growing,

A S AN instance of the steady growth of Santa Ana, the Blade of that city mentions that since January 1 fifty-eight houses have been built, and eighteen more are in course of construction within the corporate limits. During 1897 twenty-three buildings were erected, which shows that, although nothing in the nature of a building boom is in progress at present, property-owners in Santa Ana are evidencing their faith in its future as a business center by the best of good works.

Another Sugar Factory.

THE Santa Barbara Press reports that a deed in escrow has been filed with the County Clerk, between the Goldtree brothers and the Union Sugar Company of that county, said deed being in escrow with the Angio-Californian Bank, limited, of San Francisco, to be delivered to the Un-ion Sugar Company as purchaser, from Goldtree brothers, vendors. The vendor reserves the right to erect a bridge across the eastern portion of said premises, or across the lake, before execution of the deed of conveyance. Paris Exposition, where they were greatly admired for the perfect preservation of every detail of structure of the wood, for the very high polish, and for the exquisite interblending of the colors in the mass, due to the presence of various oxides, in the original silicifying solutions. The Mining and Scientific Press says:

"No other country in the world can send to the lapidary such magnificent raw material of this nature as the petrified forests of Arizona afford. Not even the imperial works at Ekaterinburg, Russia, with the wealth of kalkansto jasper, massive malachita and other superb ornamental stones, can rival the beauty of the agatized wood of Arizona.

"Recent reports received by the Interior Department about the condition of this forest indicate that it is rapidly being used up for commercial purposes, and unless the government steps in to stop the despoilment, the whole forest, which is one of the greatest natural curiosities in the world, will disappear. There is now building in Denver a hotel, all the walls of which are to be faced with the silicified wood to be taken from the forest, and all the tables for the hotel are to be made of it. At this rate of consumption it would not be long before all the petrified wood would be used up. Commissioner Hermann thinks that there is immediate necessity for action on the part of the department to protect this wonderful curiosity from despoilment. It is his opinion that the best way in which the forest can be preserved is to make it a forest reserve.

Every cell and fibre of the former wood is preserved in stone. A forest of trees appears to have been entombed in the rocks and to have been preserved by a slow process of replacement by silica from solutions permeating the bed. Subsequently the surrounding sediments were washed away, but the enduring fossils of the trees remained."

Mountain Resort Improvements

Mountain Resort Improvements.

A CCORDING to the San Jacinto Register, some very big improvements will soon be commenced at Idylwild. Strawberry Valley, by the Native Lumber Company. Plans are now being drawn by an architect for a large pavilion 40x80 feet wide, with galleries 12x40 feet at each end. The sides will be of canvas on large rollers, so as to be let up or down as the weather demands. The new hotel building will be a two-story affair, containing about twenty rooms, with water piped to each room. The walls will be celled and sowdust placed between the outer and inner walls. Around the entire building will be a veranda ten feet wide. It is the idea of the company to make Idlywild the finest mountain

DON'T BUY THEM.

Support of Sensational Papers is a Wrong to Society.

[New York Times:] We observe with [New York Times:] We observe with interest that the students of Packard College have been passing five preambles and a resolution respecting what they describe as the "yellow journals." The preambles consist of what every-body says, even the purchasers of the journals in question, and may therefore be dismissed. The resolution, however, asks "the coöperation of the public in refusing to buy these sheets," and that is very much to the point. The journals in question are not published for the health of their proprietors. They are published in order to lished for the health of their proprietors. They are published in order to make money and to attain the largest circulation, and their intelligent proprietors find the course they adopt the surest means to this end. Denunciation of them is merely denunciation of them is merely denunciation of the people who buy them, and therefore comes very oddly, as it often does come, from people who buy them. Without doubt there are among these purchasers many who do not believe what they see in them, but treat them as amuseing or exciting works of ficwhat they see in them, but treat them as amuseling or exciting works of fiction, or think they do. They are willing to buy a cent's worth of lies in the morning and another cent's worth in the afternoop by way of a cheap stimulant or moral cocktail.

The attitude of such people when they take to denouncing what they persist in patronizing is neither engaging nor respectable. They may believe that the stimulant does them no harm. But they cannot be sure of that. Part of the stimulant does them no harm. But they cannot be sure of that. Part of the stimulation consists in the constant guessing how much of what they are reading is true, and of this they can never be certain. Meanwhile some of the yellow is sure to "rub off" on their own minds. A man who has been indulging himself in a debauch of yellow "news," even though he at once "exhibits" to himself the bromide of a truthful newspaper, can generally be told by his discourse upon the Spanish question. His discourse will consist largely of "ifs," putting hypothetically the suggestions which the yellow newspapers have put without qualification. If, he will say, Sagasta did cable instructions to have the Maine blown up, or if the divers have found fragments of mines and traced the wires connecting them to Marshal Blanco's head-quarters, why in that case we must do so and so. If the man who pretends that he reads the yellow newspapers as fiction will examine himself, he will find this to be the effect upon him. And, indeed, the morality of the practice of buying lies, avowedly lies, is fairly open to question.

But how about the weaker vessels? There is a considerable number of the readers of the yellow newspapers who not only find the news those journals purvey stimulating, but believe it to be nutritious. They swallow without question the tremendous whoppers which the authors of them concoct with shrieks of laughter. How large this proportion is of the total buyers which the authors of them concoct with shrieks of laughter. How large this proportion is of the tot

It will be the duty of the ambulance ship to remain within signal in case of ship to remain within signal in case of a naval conflict, or in case of a large number of soldiers being wounded ashore, to enter the nearest port when it is possible, and receive as many of the wounded as can be transferred. "It is necessary," said Surgeon-Gen-eral Van Reypen when speaking of the ambulance ship, "that a vessel of this nature should be very speedy, for in the case of wounded men speed is sometimes necessary to life. This was one reson for choosing the Duchesse one reason for choosing the Duchesse. Under present conditions, an ambu-lance ship is a necessity to every fleet in time of war. A speedy vessel of this sort will be able to take her assignment of sick and wounded and land them at the nearest shore hospital in a very short space of time. Under the Geneva award, such vessels would be free from attack by an enemy, and so you can see that the patients would be quite as safe as if ashore, and vastly more com-fortable than in the so-called sick

[Chicago News:] Those familiar ith the appearance of soldiers on arade, when brilliant uniforms, shinup as a ladies' observatory. This will be used as a convalescent cabin. A similar structure s'ands over the second-class social hall, finished in quartered oak. As yet no operating-room has been provided, but Surgeon-General Van Reypen said when questioned that it was likely a portion of the main saloon would be used for that purpose. So much for the technical equipment and fitting of the Duchesse. As a matter of fact, she is a marvel, because there have been carried out aboard of her many ideas that have hitherto been only theories. For years the ambulance ship has been a study of the naval surgeon-General. Up to the present time the quarters of the sick and wounded aboard a warship have been located in wheat is known as the sick bay, awar forward, practically occupying a space in the bow, where the groaning of the chain was heard at all times and the chain was heard to be kept in its archives. The manifest to take down the freed uniforms, which admirate hig in the New York National Guard, is a timely and most forcible reminder of all that war implies in the way of incessant and unscrupulously performed labor. He says little of the long-painful marches, when every pround of the fifty in the soldier's equipment weighs a ton, and nothing of the dreadful moments before an engagement, more than outweighing actual conflict or its trials to the nerves; but he tells the untrained soldier what he has to do every day to fulfill his duty to his fellows and his country.

When in the enemy's country or confronted by armed forces in its own the army on the march is surrounded on all sides by scouting parties duly detailed for the purpose. In marching advance and flanking guards are deployed and in the rear a force is also stationed, especially trained in its duties. No sooner has a halt been made, even if for an hour, than another cloud of soldiers is thrown out about the main body. And when camp is made for the night the outposts and pickets are detailed at a considerable distance from the main body. In all these cases the manner in which the men are arranged is a highly technical matter, the experiences of centures distance from the main body. In all these cases the manner in which the men are arranged is a highly technical matter, the experiences of centuries uniting to guide them in their provision against surprises. When the sentinels and pickets have been arranged in accordance with the approved plans the commander of the outpost imparts a knowledge of facts and duties to his subordinates about him. He informs them of the general front of their line, of the exact position occupied by each component of the outpost, of the whereabouts of the neighboring supports and pickets by day and by night, where the enemy is and what he intends doing as far as it can be found out, the way along which he will probably come, the direction and method of patrolling, what to do if an attack is made, how to treat flags of truce and deserters, what reports are expected and when they are to be made, where his own headquarters are, and, finally, the countersign and parole. The sentinels, on the other hand, with smoking and talking strictly forbidden, and all the bright points on their uniforms likely to attract attention carefully made dull, are required, each for himself, to understand clearly and distinctly the countersign, the number of his post, the number and position of his post, the number and position of his post, the number and position of his post, the number and where he is to be looked for, the points to which all the roads, paths and railroads in sight lead, the names of all the rivers and villages in sight and the signals to be used in communicating with the pickets.

No matter how weary the day's march thas made the picket, his duty is outlined here, and the penalty for disobedience or neglect is death. And this is only a small part of the intelligence required. There are rules laid down, which every good soldier learns regarding computations. For example, if an outpost sees a body of the enemy he remembers that 200 infantry in column of fours take a minute to paas a given point, if marching in quick time, and this is equivalent to 150 cavalry at a walk, 100 if behind infantry, 260 at a trot, or four guns if in the rear of infantry. Or, if the whole column is in view, a calculation may be made on the basis of one yard for two infantrymen, or one cavalry-man, or twenty yards for a gun or caisson. Distances are computed thus: At 2000 yards a mouted man looks like a dot, at 1200 yards infantry and cavalry can be told apart, at 1000 yards a line of men looks like a bot of men looks like a bot of yards arms and legs can be distinctly, at 800 yards arms and legs can be distinctly same in the files of a squad can be counted.

The first typewriter was a machine with raised letters, invented by Henry Mill of En land, in 1714, for the use of the blind; but beyond marking the era of mechanical writing machines, it was of no value, and for nearly one hundred and forty years no step forward was made. Nearly all the improvements, and certainly the credit for the general introduction of the typewriter, belong to America. ing, it is not a navy yard at all, but a gun factory. Here it is that all the heavy guns and most of the light landheavy guns and most of the light landing and beat guns for the navy are built. The amount of work done in this great national factory is enormous, even in times of peace, but now that the lathes, engines and tools are running at full speed twenty-four hours out of twenty-four, the number of guns and gun carriages turned out is nearly Passing through the gate with its trim marine sentry pacing to and fro, the visitor sees uniformed officers hastening this way and that, busy with their duties, and hears on every side the dull rumble of machinery, the heavy thud of the triphammer, and the sporting of the seem cranes. A small snorting of the steam cranes. A small army of draftsmen in the offices are busily preparing plans and drawings for the use of the gun-builders, and the civilian bosses and foremen of civilian bosses and foremen of the shops are everywhere keeping watch with eagle eyes. Theirs is a most re-sponsible duty, for any careless and incompetent workman with a single slip of his tool might spoil a gun car-riage which has cost the government thousands of dollars to put together.

The putting together or "assembling" of a modern gun is apparently a simple matter. But it is really one of the most delicate operations in the world. The delicate operations in the word. Inegreatest care and precision are necessary to make the different parts exactly fit, and one revolution too many of a plane or boring tool would injure the part beyond repair. Hence comes much of the fascination in watching the construction of one of the big guns as it grows in massive and polished beauty ready to take its place on one of our men-of-war.

First of all the tube of the piece comes to the factory from one of the big steel compagies, the Bettelehem or the Midvale, which have the contracts to furnish forgings. The tube comes in the rough with only a core bored out, and looks like 2 beavy piece of steel pipe. For the 4-inch guns it is 13 feet 7 inches long, while for the 13-inch guns it attains a length of 40 feet. This tube forms a basis for all future operations. A modern gun is built up by slipping upon it a number of jackets and adjustments. A 13-inch gun when finished has thirteen separate and distinctive parts which have been assembled and fletted to the minutest fraction of an inch. As the caliber and size of the gun diminish, the number of parts is reduced, and the 4-inch plece is composed of only five. In building up the gun the rough tube and the bands are first placed in lathes and carefully planed down to the dimensions required. The diameter of the interior of the jacket which is to slip over the tube half way its length, must correspond with mathematical exactness to the diameter of the tube's exterior, while the hoops, which in turn fit over this jacket, must be treated with a like precision. This work of planing is done in the great north gun shop, as it is known at the navy yard, and when it is completed, the tube and the bands have to be carried to the "shrinking pit" at the north end of the shop, where the next process is to be undergone. There are three heavy traveling cranes in the shop, of 110, forty and fifteen tons lifting-power capacity, respectively, and they pick up the duge pleces of iron and carry them to their destination as easily and l a company of soldiers. The jacket has been placed in the oven and sealed up, to await expansion by the heat. The foreman gives the word, the traveling crane comes up and lifts off the hot lid of the oven, exposing the jacket within, the hooks are made fast to a clamp previously attached to the jacket, and the heated mass is lifted carefully from its fiery bed. The engineer of the crane watches with hawklike eye, the signals of the foreman below, and when a sufficient height has been reached the jacket is swung over the tube and ready for the delicate operation of riffing.

Only the most experienced mechanics in the shops are in charge of the rifling machines, for on the perfection with which they perform their work the whole utility of the gun depends. The auger which cuts the grooves is carefully adjusted and lubricated, and the little hard steel chisels fitted on a long beam which runs through the bore of the gun commence their work. Only the smallest fraction of an inch is taken off at a time, and the greatest care is required in adjusting the auger exactly. When once put in position the lathe does the rest of the work by slowly turning the gun as the tool eats its way through.

After being rifled the gun is placed on a car and carried to the breech-mechanism shop, where the interrupted screw-breech block, in use in nearly all the navies of the world, is fitted.

The carriage with its recoil cylinders for taking up the "kick" of the piece when fired, having been finished in the naval carriage shop with as conscientious care as the gun itself, the gun is put together and shipped on the barge down the Potomac River to Indian Head, to be tested.

The guns built at the Washington barge down the Potomac River to Indian Head, to be tested.

The guns built at the Washington navy yard are recognized as the most perfect and powerful specimens of naval ordnance in the world, and the weight of their powder charge and projectile, their length and their penetration would have been considered outside of the bounds of reason thirty years ago. The length of a 13-inch breech-loading rifle is 40 feet; its weight 60½tons; it carries a projectile weighing 1100 pounds—more than half a ton—which can penetrate steel 23.42 inches thick at a distance of 1500 yards. It has a velocity at the muzzle of 2100 feet a second, and a velocity of 1805 feet at a distance of 2500 yards, which is produced by the explosion of 550 pounds of brown prismatic powder, each grain of which is cetagonal in shape and molded to an exact size. The cost of each discharge is about $1500. The range of a gun of 13 inches caliber is about thirteen miles, or a mile to each inch, which is the approximate range of all guns. A 13-inch gun is built to fire 250 shots before it loses its temper and becomes useless, except for old iron, but in most cases many more could probably be fired.

The 1100-pound projectile is almost as carefully made as the gun. It is of hard steel, with an armor-piercing point, and is fitted with copper bands, which take against the rifling, and, being of soft metal, do not injure the delicate grooves, of which there are fifty-two.

Besides these monster cannon, the Washington navy yard produces small rapid-fire ordinance of the Fletcher, Maxim, Driggs-Shroeder and Hotchiss types, which are used aboard ship as a protection against torpedo boats, for landing parties, and for boat service. These weapons are much simpler in their construction than the heavy ordinance, but the same great care and thoroughness of workmanship characterize their building as the heavy ordinance.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] Nine of the most staid and respectable furnilies in Burrton, Kan., have thrown away their stove lids and packed their dishes on the back kitchen stoves. Whether they have imbibed somewhat of the restless "something new" spritt of their maternal commonwealth or not, they have shocked the ordinary ideas of economic propriety, and have formed a cooperative living association, wherein the food question is settled upon a cooperative basis.

Burrton is a small village, without any immediate prospect of growing larger. Located in the midst of a fair farming community, it has no opportunity for importing choice land products, nor, indeed, enough means to procure a city variety. The size of the town does not warrant the location of a bakery, and all the wheat stuff must be bought from the heighboring cities. As a consequence of the himited population, there is a very small supply of hired help, even smaller than the limited demand. The heavy burdens of the household falls upon the housewife alone, and very little social intercourse can be enjoyed. In such a condition of affairs the Coöperative Living Association was organized for the economic and social benefit of its membership. In order to insure a reliable, orthodox reputation, the association has enrolled among its members bankers, merchants, druggists, and a representative preceptor and dominie.

The practical advantages of the club may be noted as follows First, the saving of from fifteen to twenty-five hours of "kitchen worry" per week; second, the providing of well-cooked and well-served meals, ranging in cost from 7½ cents to 9 cents per mea!

It may be well to note that "low a rents (38 per month for an eight-room house,) and the comparatively low wages paid to the cook (252 per month, with use of house, and with board for herself and family of three childien,) may not be duplicated in larger towns.

may not be duplicated in larger towns.

A Purchasing Committee of three members buys the provisions: Groceries at wholesale rates, meat by the quarter and side, and provisions in correspondingly large quantities. Another member acts as treasurer, and all bills are paid promptly every Monday morning for the week ending Saturday previous.

The real disadvantages, and those likely to be met, may be specified—as careless cook, high rents, unsuitable building, distance of home from clubhouse, and the monotony of living away from the home board.

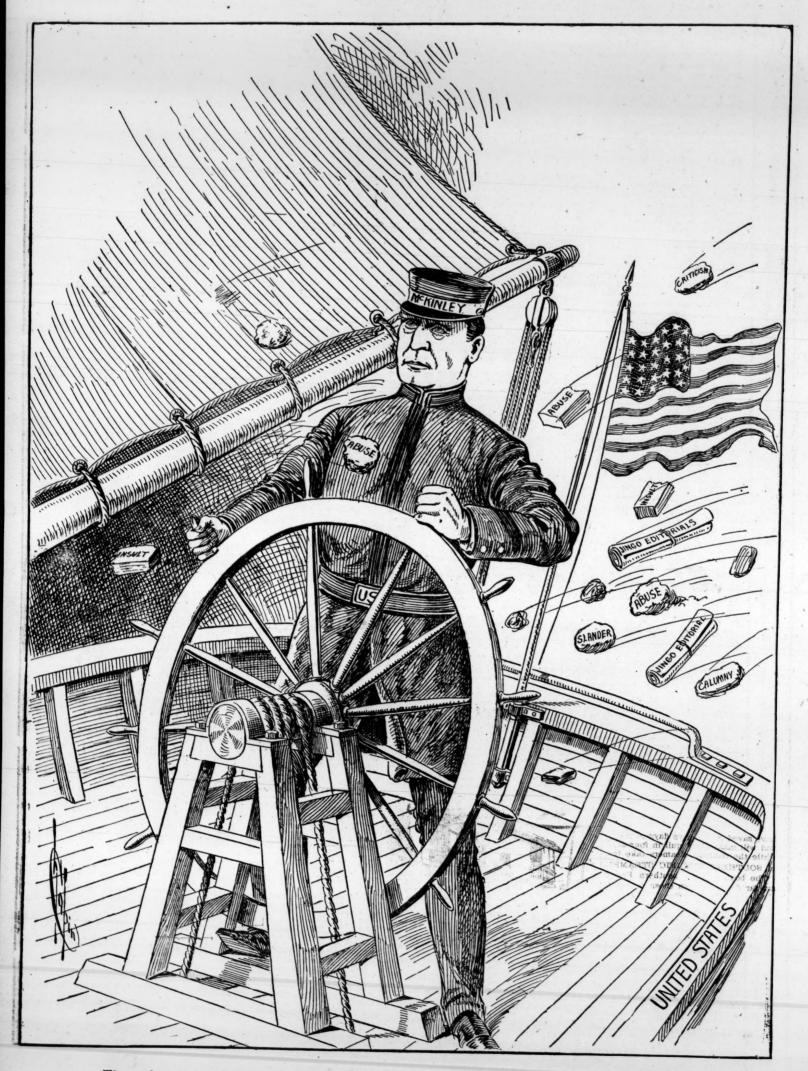

To sum up, for 8 cents per meal, the heat and worry of the kitchen are avoided; hired help is largely dispensed with; greater variety is provided with a smaller outlay of labor and innoney, and apart from the economic value of a month's living being reduced to $1.20, there is a social feature that makes mealtime a feast of fellowship, as well as an alleviator to the pangs of hunger.

In the same works where the miniature-projector just described was designed, searchlights of seventy-two inches are now being constructed for naval and commercial service. The firm, instead of relying, as was-formerly the custom, on foreign lens-makers, has a fine lens-making plant of its own, where not only are the lenses ground and pollshed, but the special glass required is prepared in a large sweating furnace heated with crude oil vaporized by heated compressed air. The prepared glass is placed in fire-clay moulds of the shape of the rough lens, and the glass is placed in fire-clay moulds of the shape of the rough lens, and the heat is gradually increased until the glass "sweats" down between the mold, and the surplus oozes out from the sides. The mold is then placed in an oven and buried in red-hot sand, and the temperature is gradually reduced over a period of two weeks. The glass when cold has become thoroughly annealed, and will stand the severe heating and chilling to which it is exposed in the searchlights without risk of breakage.

FEATURES OF LIFE AND TRAVEL ON THE SOUTH PACIFIC OCEAN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ON THE EQUATOR, March 15, 1898. S I begin this letter, I am on the hottest geographical line on the A face of the globe. I am sitting on the deck of the steamship Santiago, opposite, but out of sight. of the coast of Ecuador and almost exactly on the equator. We shall cross it within an hour. If it were not for a slight breeze which still follows us from the northeast trade winds, the air would be stifling, and as it is the very sea seems to steam. At my right there is a vast extent of ocean, which the sun has turned into molten silver. Ten billion diamonds are dancing up and down upon the wavelets, and al-though I am under cover, the light of the sun as reflected from the water dazzles my eyes as much as the direct rays of a July sun at home. On the opposite side of the vessel, in the shadow, the water if of an indigo blue, and as I stand up and look about me I see nothing but a vast expanse me I see nothing but a vast expanse of what, in the hot, hazy air, seems to be a steaming sea. To the westward stretches the Pacific. a distance of about 10,000 miles, before it teaches the lower part of Asia, and to the east, is the equatorial region of South America, including snow-capped Andes and the mighty Amazon, my present field of travel. It is now three days since I left Panama for Guayaquil, the port of Ecuador, and until this morning we have been sailing by the coast ing we have been salling by the coast of Colombia, but in many places 150 miles from the shore. In this way we some roosting, and others poking their heads out to get at the water and corn in the troughs outside. The ducks and geese are on the ground floor. A little further over there are crates filled with potatoes and onions and others containing oranges and pineapples. The sheep and cattle are in pens and stalls two floors below. They are in the steerage, near the butcher shops and kitchens, and where there is what you do not find on other ships, a traveling market. There are men who pay big sums for the privilege of selling on the south Pacific ships to the people at the ports. Our market-men have in their stock at present about a dozen wagon loads of oranges and pineapples from Panama, and ten cattle from Chile, and they will load up with other things at Guayaquil. They will take this stuff to the ports along the deserts of Peru and Chile, and, as nothing grows there, will get very high prices. Travel is very costly in these ships. There are two lines which sail between Panama and Valparaiso. One belongs to the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, and the other to the Chileans. The two companies have combined, and as they have a monopoly of the business, they keep up the rates. I have never paid so much for steamship travel as I am now doing. The fare to Guayaquil from Panama is $67 in gold for a distance of about eight hundred miles, or more than 8 cents a mile. The fares to Europe by the first-class Atlantic liners do not run more than 3 cents a mile, and on some of the boats you can go for 2 cents or less. The freight rates here are also very high, being about 1 cent a pound for this trip. These lines have steamers every week north and south from Panama to Valparaiso, a distance of 3000 miles. The through rate is $154, but all passengers are charged extra for stop-overs at the ports, and the local rates are correspondingly higher.

SOMETHING ABOUT COLOMBIA.

I am astounded at the extent of these South American countries. The republic of Colombia, along which we republic of Colombia, along which we have been sailing, and of which the Isthmus of Panama forms a part, is longer from north to south than the distance between St. Paul and New Orleans, and wider in some parts than a beeline from New York to Chicago. It contains more than 500,000 square miles. It is one-sixth the size of the United States without Alasks, and it would make over nine States the size of New York, or ten as big as Ohio or Kentucky. The isthmus or department of Panama has an area almost or Kentucky. The isthmus or department of Panama has an area almost four times as big as that of Massachusetts and the Colombian state of Cauca is almost as large as Texas. I have met a number of Americans and others who have recently traveled in many parts of Colombia. They tell me the country is an undeveloped empire and that a great part of it is as yet unexplored. There are some Americans engaged in business of one kind or another in Colombia. Some are the extreme north in the Chiriqui lands of the upper isthmus, raising coffee, and others have been buying lands in the Cauca Valley. This val-ley is over the mountains, a little back lands in the Cauca valley. This valley is over the mountains, a little back of the Pacific. It is several hundred miles long and about twenty or more miles wide, and it is said to have some of the most fertile lands on the globe. One American, named Eder, who has recently died, is said to have left a big fortune made out of his coffee plantations. I have heard it said that his income was $100,000 a year from them; and another had a contract for a railroad upon which he did so little work that the Colombian government finally paid a million dollars to get rid of him. This was in the case of the concession for the Cauca Valley Railroad, which was to connect this rich region with the port of Buenaventura. I am told that English capitalists have now the concession and that they will complete the road. It is now about twenty miles long, and is now about twenty miles long, and the intention is to build it on to the capital of the province, the city of Cali, which is sixty-four miles from Buenaventura. In addition to this road, there are a half dozen other little railroads in the country, comprising, altogether, about four hundred miles of truck more than one-fourth of which track, more than one-fourth of which has been built by Americans. The chief bank of Panama, that of Henry Ehrman, is American. The head of the firm came to Panama with 25 cents thirty years ago. He is now worth several million dollars, and fives in Paris.

A RIVER OF VINGEAR.

The chief means of getting about 'through Colombia is on the rivers and on the mule and donkey paths which cross the mountains everywhere. There is no country which has a greater number or more curious streams. What would you think of a river of vinegar? Colombia has one. It is the upper part of the Cauca River. The Cauca would you think of a river of vinegar; Colombia has one. It is the upper part of the Cauca River. The Cauca rises in the southern part of the coun-try near Ecuador, and flows 680 miles north and empties into the Magdalena. During the first part of its course it has waters which contain eleven parts has waters which contain eleven parts of sulphuric acid and nine parts of hydrochloric acid in every thousand, It is so sour within some miles of its source that no fish can live in it, and it goes by the name of the Rio Vinagre, which means the Vinegar River. The Magdalena, the chief river of Colombia, corresponds with our Mississippi. It is more than one thousand miles long. It is as wide, but not so deep as the Mississippi but it to so sippl. It is more than one thousand miles long. It is as wide, but not so deep, as the Mississippl, but it cuts the country right in two. Steamers of light draft sail weekly from Barranquilla. on the Cr. obean Sea, up the Magdalena to Londo, where you take mules and climb up to the great plain of Boreta, on which Bogota, the Coof Bogota, on which Bogota, the Coof Bogota, on which Bogota, the Co-lombian capital, is situated. Then there are branches of the Amazon and of other big rivers in Colombia, so that the country is almost as well watered as China. Ten of the little steamers on the Colombia were made at Pitts-burgh, and brought from New York in pieces and here put together.

BOGOTA.

Just a word or so about Bogota. It is a town of 100,000 inhabitants, and it has electric lights and a street railroad, which were put in by Americans. It has a university ninety-five years old, a national theater, a library of 50,000 volumes, an astronomical observatory and a poorhouse. The town is on a plain about a half mile higher $\epsilon$ in the air than Denver, and its climate is, I'am told, much the same. This is the headquarters of the army, and the scene of a revolution now and and the scene of a revolution now

A LAND OF FAT CONCESSIONS.

It is at Bogota that the President lives, and here the Congress meets. It is here that the fat concessions are given out. Colombia is a land of concessions. I have told you of the big fortunes which Americans have made out of the Panama Railroad, which now pays a quarter of a million dol-lars a year to the government. Another valuable concession is the sait moropoly. No salt can be sold except by the party owning this concession. by the party owning this concession. At present the owner is Mrs. Nunez. It is hung up before his blessedness. She has salt mines and furnishes the 5,00,000 people of Colombia with a very poor article at very high prices. Tobacco is another concession, and playing cards another. The gambling the saint and the gold did the work houses of Panama pay $48,000 a year houses of Panama pay $48,000 a year. Tobacco is another concession, and playing cards another. The gambling houses of Panama pay $48.000 a year for the right to keep other people out for the right to keep other people out of the business, and as far as I can learn they are glad to do it. There is, of course, nothing like the morey affoat now that there was during the old canal days, but every once in a while they catch a sucker, as they did

This is owned by a stock company, which has a capital of $200,000. The stock pays dividends cf $200,000. The stock pays dividends of 45 per cent, a year, and 10,000 tickets of a dollar a piece are sold every week. The prizes range from $3000 downward. Men, women and children, black and white, accost you in the hotels, on the streets and in the railroad stations, and offer you chances for the next drawing. I happened to be passing the lottery office on Sunday when the drawing was going on, and stepped in. A little boy of about 8 years of age, had been picked out of the crowd and put upon a table. In front of him was a revoiving wire basket filled with hollow ivory balls, each containing one of ing wire basket filled with hollow ivory balls, each containing one of the numbers from 1 to 10. The basket was whirled and the boy picked out a ball. The number in it was the thousands of the prize; another whirl gave the figure for the hundreds, a third for the ten, and a fourth for the units. The whole thing was fair enough, only, as the alcalde, or city judge, in charge told me, there was only about one chance in 500 of a ticket holder drawing anything. The president of this company is a naturalized American ing anything. The president of this company is a naturalized American citizen named Duque. He is the owner of the only paper in Panama and n's profits from his $80,000 worth of lottery stock are about $35,000 in silver a year.

here for waterworks. Panama is now supplied with water by peddlers, who go about through the streets, seated on go about through the streets, seated on barrel carts, each of which is pulled by a mule. In the wet season the city relies on the cisterns. There is, I am told, good water in the hills twelve miles away, and it could easily be piped to the city. Panama has about 25,000 people.

THE GOLD MINES OF COLOMBIA The idea prevails in the United States that the greater part of South America is low, moist and unhealth-This is not so. 'There are vast areas here which are as salubriuos as any part of North America. Mr. Ken-nedy, an American mining engineer who has prospected in all parts of our continent, as well as in many parts of this, tells me that for every habita-ble square mile in North America ther is an equally rich and healthful square mile here, and that south of the equa-tor there are vast areas of undeveloped agricultural territory which have no been touched. He says that this is the Klondike of the future in gold as the Klondike of the tuture in gold as well as in other things, and predicts that the eyes of the world will soon be turned southward. In Colombia the most of the people live back from the coasts, where there are plains and valleys of vast extent from 3000 to 5000 and more feet above the sea. Colombia is a land of gold. It is like Alaska in that you cannot wash the soil anywhere along the rivers without finding what the miners call color. I saw men washing the sands of the sea in the Bay of Panama, and though I saw men washing the sands of the sea in the Bay of Panama, and though they said they did not get much, I am told that they have been doing the same work for years. It was here that the Spaniards got some of their first gold, and since the conquest an aggregate of $700,000,000 worth of precious metals has been taken out of Colombia. A great deal of mining of Colombia. A great deal of mining is now going on in the department or state of Antioqua, which is reached by going several hundreds of miles up by going several ninareds of miles up the Magdalena River. Here small diamonds are sometimes found with the gold. English parties own a num-ber of the best mines in this region, and much capital is invested. There are now between 300 and 400 gold mines now being worked in Colombia. GOLDEN CURE FOR ALL DISEASES

Nearly all of the Indian tribes have more or less gold. I have been told of a curious method which the church has of getting the Indians to give up their gold. They are prone to hoar it, but as they are very superstitious the priests have in some of the the priests have in some of the churches the images of certain seints who are supposed to cure discases, but to whom must first be offered in gold a miniature image of the part which is diseased. If a man has a sore leg he molds a little leg of gold—it may be the size of his little finger, it may be larger—and offers it to the seint.

A PARADISE FOR A PATENT-MED ICINE MAN.

Mr. Mansfield is generally considered one of the best of the foreign authority on the wonderful wealth of vegetable life of the Isthmus of Panama Before I left Washington, I was asked vegetable life of the Isthmus of Panama. Before I left Washington, I was asked by the Secretary of Agriculture to look up certain plants and trees which it is thought might profitably be introduced into the United States. Among those asked for from the isthmus was the Platonic bamboo, which is said to have a leaf a foot wide and fifteen feet long. It was this inquiry that brought me into contact with Mr. Mansfield and gave me much curious information. Said he: "There is a wonderful variety of plant life here, and many specimens I believe which are not generally known."

There are more than twenty varieties of bamboos on the isthmus. There are woods superior in their lasting qualties to the teak wood of Siam, and a great amount of mahogany and dye woods. There are plants and woods which the Indians use for medicinal purposes, which I am surprised are not taken up by our doctors. Take the cacique wood. This will stop the flowing of blood almost instantly. If you scrape off a little dust from a cacique stick and but in on a cut the nowing of blood almost instantly. If you scrape off a little dust from a cacique stick and put in on a cut the blood will immediately stop running. The Indians use it for all kinds of cuts. and they say that if a person who has a hemorrhage of any kind takes hold of a cacique stick it will stop at. You find such a stick in many an Indian hut ready for use in case of accident. This wood is expensive, a piece the size of a walking cane costing in Panama, $10 and upward. The necha fruit is good for cancers and tumors. Another tree is a snake-poison anti-dote, and Mr. Mansfield says that he and ther ree is a snake-poison antidote, and Mr. Mansfield says that he learns of some new medicinal plant or tree nearly every time he visits his little plantation away off in the interior, where he buys of the Indians and has a factory for the making of alcohol, rum and other such things.

During his last trip, he was shown a plant which was said to be a wonderful emetic. He asked an Indian girl to make some tea of it for himself and a partner, and they agreed together that they would test the virtues of the plant by drinking a cup.
They did so. The liquor tasted sweet and seemed not at all bad as it went down. A moment later both men made a rush for the door. Their stomachs were turned inside out, and as Mr. Mansfield expressed it, they thought that even their heels were coming up through their throats. There is a fruit something like a melon, sold in the markets of Panama which is a is a fruit something like a meion, sold in the markets of Panama which is a strong digestant, and which, I am told, has almost as much pepsin in it as a pig's stomach, and farther down in a pig's stomach, and farther down in Colombia grows the lechemiel tree, the sap of which is like cow's milk, and has much the same nutritious prop-erties. Then in some provinces the cinchona or quinine tree grows, and a'so the cacao, from which comes our checolate.

AN AMERICAN COCOANUT FLAN-TATION.

Along the lowlands of Colombia there are plenty of cocoanut trees. The cocoanuts, you know, grow on a palm tree. They are to be seen by the bushel along the Isthmus of Panama, hanging close to the stem of the tree, away up at the top, often as high as thirty feet above the ground, where the great palm leaves spring out. It is only lately that men have gone into is only lately that men have gone into cocoanut raising as a business, and I am told that groves of these trees have recently been planted in Florida. There is a big cocoanut plantation owned by an American in partnership with a Colombian on the Lighthouse point, just opposite where the steamers land at Colom. The American is the Mr. Hyatt of Washington of whom I have spoken as being connected with the big manganese mine owned by John K. Cowen and others. Mr. Hyatt tells me that the plantation consists of 1500 acres and that they have already planted 40,000 trees and have about 8000 in bearing. They are now shipping from fifteen to and have about 8000 in bearing. They are now shipping from fifteen to twenty thousand nuts a month to New York, and within three years from now, when the rest of their trees will be in fruit, they expect the orchard to produce 75,000 nuts a month. Cocoanut trees, you know, bear all the year round, and the blossoms and the ripe nuts are on the tree at the same time. The nuts are not nicked but time. The nuts are not picked, but drop from the tree when they are ripe, and the workmen go daily from tree to tree and pick up the nuts, husk them, and they are then ready for them, and they are then ready for shipment. They bring from $20 to $25 a thousand in New York, and the greater part of this is clear profit.

HOW COCOANUTS ARE RAISED. I asked Mr. Hyatt to tell me something of the expense and management of such an orchard. Said he

of such an orchard. Said he:
"It costs very little to run it. We are now paying out, all told, only about $150 a month, and our receipts are from $300 to $500 a month. You see, the trees need practically no cutivation, and after they are once in bearing all we have to do is to gother and ship the nuts. We have one part of the plantation which we call thrusery. Here we resise the young of the plantation which we call the nursery. Here we resise the young trees. The nuts are placed on the top of the ground a short distance apart. Within a short time each nut sends out a sprout from one of the little eyes or holes which are found in one end of it. The sprout shoots up into the air and a root shoots down into the grund. Within a few months without any attention whatever, the the air and a root shoots down into the grund. Within a few months without any attention whatever, the sprout grows from two to three feeligh, and it is then ready for transplanting. This is done by breaking off the root and putting the nut and sprout into a little hole in the ground just a little deeper than the thickness of the nut. We press the earth around it and the planting is done. We set the trees out about fifteen feet apart. For the first three years we cut out the brush from around the trees, but after this they are left to take care of themselves. They begin to bear at about seven years of age, and keep on bearing for many years. A good tree should drop about seventy-five nuts a year, and many of ours do much better than that.

SOME QUEER INSTITUTIONS IN

SOME QUEER INSTITUTIONS IN PANAMA.

I found Panama one of the queer towns of the world. It is like a little city of old Spain, and looking at it from the harbor it makes you think from the harbor it makes you think of Venice. The houses along the sea hang out over the water, and the waves dash in some places against their walls. The streets of Panama wind in and out, uphill and down. The houses are close to the narrow sidewalks, and every house has an overlanging possible or gallery extending walks, and every house has an over-hanging porch or gallery extending out from its second story, so that you are protected from the sun as you walk along the streets. The richer classes live on the upper ficors. The ground floors are given up to the poor and to the stores. Few of the ground-floor rooms have windows, and you can look in the open door as you pass through the streets and see all sorts of household operations going on. of household operations going on. Here a woman is combing her hair, Here a woman is combing her hair, there one is sewing, and a little further on one is cutting up beef for her breakfast stew. The stores have no display windows, and the goods seem to be pilled about without regard to show or order. There are no fixed prices, I am told, and most of the trading is a matter of dickering. The Grand Central Hotel, where I stopped, was opposite the Cathedral of Panama, and facing the plaza, about which the soldiers paraded in the morning and in which the band played at night.

SUNDAY IN PANAMA

SUNDAY IN PANAMA. I happened to be in Panama on Sunday. There was a service at all the places of worship in the morning, and after that the town was run on what Chicago's young Mayor calls "the wide open" order. Promptly at 1 o'clock the Panama lottery had its weekly drawing, at 2 o'clock a cock fight came off, and at 4 there was a bull-fight inside the ruined walls of one of the great churches of Panama's past. Five bulls were tortured and one was killed by the bull-fighter thrusting a sword into it, and having missed its heart, pounding and stabbing it in the back of the neck while the audience of the neck while the audience howled with delight. In the evening the whole town turned out and walked up and down the plaza, while the band played. There were many pretty girls among the promenaders, but each of the respectable maldens had one or more of her sisters, her cousins or her aunts of maturer years with her. and there was neither flirting nor spooning openly seen. I am told that even an engaged couple are not al-lowed by the better classes of Panamanians to go about alone, and that if one invites his best girl to the thea-ter he is supposed to include all of the ladies of the family in the invitation. One of the Americans now the isthmus, when he first came igave a young Panama lady such invitation, and when he arrived at invitation, and when he arrived at the house found a party of thirteen old and middle-aged women ready to go along with him and his inamorata. The bills for that night were more than his weekly salary, and it was only by chance that he happened to have enough money with him to pay them. FRANK G. CARPENTER. [Copyright, 1898, by Frank G. nature's effort to throw them off, a struggle to which the system is unequal, unless properly assisted. Boils and pimples and an incessant weariness tell the story. The appetite fails just when a good one is needed, the energies relax, and an unspeakable languor pervades the wornout Ureatest body. Every one knows the importance of thoroughly cleansing the blood and purifying the system and thus avoiding the deadly typhoid fever and other dangerous diseases which crowd the path of summer. But it is equally important that the right remedy be taken at this critical period—one which will purify and build up the system at the same time. For this purpose nothing can compare with Swift's Specific (S. S. S.). A few bottles just now will thoroughly cleanse the blood and renovate and strengthen the system, improve the appetite, and impart new life and vigor to the entire body. in time of peace-such as the terrific explosion in Havana Harbor which converted our splendid battleship into a steel burial casket for so many of its brave crew all the world is shocked and horrified In the midst of war a similar occurrence makes little impression; it is simply a part of the every-day business of fighting. In the former case it is like a thunder crash bursting forth on the still air-and men leap to their feet and throng the streets in wild ex-citement; but in the tunnil of battle, the same sound would scarcely be noticed ..

This probably, with the added factor of remoteness, is the reason why a certain dramatic incident of the civit conflict in Chile, barely seven years ago, attracted so little attention. In a number of particulars the sinking of the Blanco Encalada in Caldera Bay bears a striking resemblance to the destruction of the Maine. It, too, was at night by means of sub-explosives—Whitehead torpeeffected at merged does; the crew manifested like courage, and the loss of life was similarly great. Yet the newspapers were singularly mute; for the most part brief, dry statements that such a catastrophe had occurred are all that the searcher can glean from their files, and to learn the picturesque details he is forced to resort to official reports rarely con-sulted except by specialists. Here is the story in outline:

HEN a great disaster occurs dictator. Early in January, 1891, the Chilean Congress, with a large following of the disaffected, had passed an act deposing him, and war ensued. The army adhered to Balmaceda, but the main strength of the navy was in the hands of the congressional party, who by this means selzed military supplies. prevented the transportation of troops. and kept the coast almost in a state of blockade. In this state of affairs it was necessary to do something. The dictator had secured a few torpedo heats, and with these it was resolved to strike a telling blow.

On the twenty-first of April, therefore, two fermidable craft of this description, the Candell and the Lynch, slipped out of the harbor at Quinteros and steamed northward. Each was and steamed northward. Each was provided with five torpedo tubes—one at the bow and the rest mounted breedside, two port and two starboard—and each carried seven of the terrible automobile Whitehead torpedoes ready for use. The boats were lightly armored and swift, being capable of more than twenty knots an hour; but their boilers were in boars. ble of more than twenty knots an hour; but their boilers were in bad condition, and had been patched up with brass tubing torn out of locomo-

At Huasco they got information that five big warships were stationed at Caldera, but subsequently learned that three of them had just left the harbor, and here they saw their opportunity.

Cautiously creeping along the coast they stole into Caldern Bay about 4 o'clock in the morning, April 23, the Candell leading the way and the Lynch following at a distance of about sixty yards. There was considerable ship-The usual fate of South American following at a distance of about sixty republics had overtaken Chile; Balmaceda had practically made himself ping in the port, but they were able to distinguish the grim warship by its lofty bridges, which showed plainly in the moonlight.

The doomed vessel had been undergoing repairs, and contrary to custom was moored to a buoy. So little suspision of danger was there that no torpedo nets were spread, no picket boats had been sent out, no search-light swent the waters even the watch light swept the waters: even the watch on deck, it would seem, was not over-vigilant.

Thus the swift, daring foe, approaching in Indian fashion and with indian stillness, was able to get almost within a hundred yards of the huge floating fortress before anything was discovered. Then the captain of the Candell launched his bow torpedo, end-on, with his own hands. It rushed hissing through the water like an angry sword-fish, but missed its mark by a few yards, and passing on annihilated an unlucky English merchaptman which lay at anchor in its course. The roar of the explesion shock the whole harbor. A moment shook the whole harbor. A mon later the men on the Blanco rushed to their guns and began A moment pour a spettering fire from mitrailleuse and rifles in the direction of their enemy; but the gloom and confusion made it ineffective.

Meanwhile the Candell had turned sharply and discharged its port torpedoes. Capt. Maraga maintains that both took effect, but this is contradicted by Capt. Goni of the Blanco, and seems more than doubtful. Close behind, however, sped the Lynch, using exactly the same maneuvers. Its ing exactly the same maneuvers. Its how torpedo also missed, but the sec-ond, discharged broadside on as she veered, struck the massive ironclad full amidships, between engine and boiler, rending a huge gap in her plates. She was now helpless and two minutes later lurched heavily to starboard, and sunk like an anvil. More than 180 of her crew went down with her and were lost. The whole action. her and were lost. The whole action, from the discharge of the first tor-pedo had occupied scarcely more than seven minutes!

When morning dawned, no vestige of the great fighting machine was visi

just peeping above the water. She had keeled over so that she rested on her wounded side, but the divers sub-sequently discovered a ragged opening. more than twenty feet long and from ten to twelve in width, torn through her nine-inch plates. Of so little avail is the strongest armor against the Titanic energy of modern explosive.

It would appear that the crew did honor to their manhood and discip line in that supreme ordeal—the inst moment of life to most of them; and the credit due them is the greater bethe credit due them is the greater because it was all so unexpected. It is the final test of heroism when death leaps upon those just roused from sieep, blind and bewildered in the darkness, unnerved by the sudden tumult, helplers in prison cells. Tet Capt. Conf. declares that officers and men "conducted themselves with "cale."

Capt. Cond declares that officers and men "conducted themselves with their customary valor and serenity."

Serenity! It seems a strange term to choose for such a crisis—when, amid the beliowing of cannon! and the thunder roar of dynamite, the sea around them was lifted in geyeers of form and wreckage, and their iren coffin was plunging to its watery grave. Yet the word is not amize. The true here is indeed "gerene amids." The true hero is indeed "serene amidst alarms." Honer to the brave of all nations!

With the house the young American of today, who has an inventive turn of mind, do to win nuccess an inventor.

This question was put to Thomas A. Edward to a few days ago. If any team living, by vertue of his own wenderful encouragement in the field of invention, is turned to a success in the field of invention, is turned to a success it, Mr. Edward of what he has done, gives his remarks on this subject the greatest value. His respective for taking pains, which Carriyte said was the essence of genius, is tudged infinite, and his assertion is that this and this alone is what has given him success.

'If you want a receipe for how to receive as an inventor,' said Mr. Edward in which really seems to discount all the rest. Having words, and it will do for any other businesse in which you might wish to eagage. First, find out if there is a real need for the thing, where howe started on what I think is the track and this alone is what has given him success.

INVENTING AS A BUSINESS.

"So, then, as things stand, if a man wishes to make money from his inventions he had better devise some little thing that costs but a trifle to manufacture. He will be sure to get fleeced if he does not. Then, when he brings the contrivance before the public let him steer clear of the patent office, but manipulate the sale of his article as that no one can compete with him. His 'trade secret,' as it is called, will be more valuable to him than any patent-office papers, and it will cost him nothing to produce it. After all, however, I suppose the real simon-pure inventor is not apt to be a shrewd husiness man, and therefore the thing he wants to know principally is how to produce or invent. It is impossible to lay down any absolute rule. The history of great inventions shows that accident has been responsible for many initial ideas. This, however, is not always the case, nor should it be so. Given a small amount of aptitude and a large amount of application, any man can enter the business of inventing and make a living—scant at first, but more lucrative as be goes along. There are not many who realize what this 'large amount of application, any man can enter the business of inventing and make a living—scant at first, but more nucrative as be goes along. GOOD IDEAS MUST BE CULTI-VATED.

"It is just so with invention. You have to pursue it as a business, and even more steadily than the ordinary business. If the young man starts into it with the notion of sitting down and waiting for some grand, good idea to come along, he will get, as they say, very decidedly 'left.' Ideas grow upon one. They are a matter of habit, just like anything else. If you get into the habit of conceiving good ideas they will grow upon you until you have more than you need. It is, of course, impossible to make 'a silk purse out of a saw's car,' and yet I don't know. Ferhaps if one of these aspiring young inventors sits up long enough and thinks hard enough he may find some way of beating that old proverb after all.' [Copyright, 1888, by S. S. McClure Co.]

"Somewhere in the South," says Congressman Sulloway, in the Chicago Tribune, "a brigh, colored boy appeared before the Civil Service Commission to be examined for the position of letter-carrier. 'How far is it from the earth to the moon?' was the first question asked by those who were to determine the young man's fitness for the place he sought. 'How fah am it from the earf to de moon?' echoed the applicant. 'My Lawd, boss, if you's gwine to put me on dat route I don't want de job. With that the young man grabbed his hat and left as though he were chased."

Good Out of Evil.

[Salt Lake Tribune:] If a war should come the southern contingent would be in the same category that the men of the West, Northwest and border States were during the war of the rebellion—ail Yankees." It would be almost worth the cost of a war to bear a Spanish picket, bent on traffic of Cuban tobacco for coffee, call out to his opponent on the hillside opposite, "Hello, Yank!" and have the southerner reply "Hyar!" It would be a giory of the earth, and would mean more for the breaking down of prejudice against a name than anything that eyer happened.

it. Get up at 6 o'clock the first morning. Keep on doing this until something in your line develops itself. If it don't do so pretty soon, you had better shorten your sleeping hours and work a little harder while you are awake. If you follow that rule, you can succeed as an inventor, or as anything else for that matter. It was the following of just such a rule that led to the invention of the electric light, the phonograph and the kinetoscope."

ANY ONE MAY BECOME AN IN-

ANY ONE MAY BECOME AN IN-VENTOR.

ANY ONE MAY BECOME AN INVENTOR.

"I believe," he continued, "that any person, even of the most limited capacity, could become an inventor by sheer hard work. You can do almost anything if you keep at it long enough. Of course, the man with a natural aptitude would get there first, but the other plodder would eventually gain his point. The constant brooding on the one thing is sure to develop new ideas concerning it, and these, in their turn, suggrest others, and soon the completed idea stands out before you. Above all things a man must not give up, once he has outlined his plan of action. A ball rolling down hill is sure to reach the bottom ultimately, no matter how many obstacle is front of you. What you want may be just beyond your nose, though you do not see it.

"I once had that fact forcibly presented to me. I was working on an invention, and finally reached a point when I could go no further. The thing lacked something, but try as a might I could not tell what it was. Finally I got angry at it and threw the whole business out of the window. Afterward I thought how foolish the action was and I went out and gathered up the wreck. In putting it together again I saw just what was needed. Repairing the broken portions suggested it, and it was so simple that I wondered I had not seen it before. Now that little addition to the apparatus could have been ascertained by a little limited. This is the fault of our mod-ready in the particular field he is investigating. For instance, if I am about to work out something, I never read up on it, nor do I inquire what has been done on it by other inventors. Knowledge of this kind is almost certain to prove a snag in the path of the inventor. He gets into the rut made by his predecessors and stops off where they have stopped. On the other hand if he goes in a direction of his own, there are no ruts ahead of him.nothing, in fact, to obstruct his progress. I have several times made inventions in this manner; then when I had completed them I have read up on the subject. I found my ideas were entirely original, but at the same time the ideas of the other fellows; were so good up to a certain point, that I should have been tempted to have followed in their footsteps if I had done any previous reading up.

He had presided at a dinner of virtuosi, and a distinguished diplomatist among the company produced a snuffbox set in precious stones, the gift of a crowned head to one of his ancestors. The presious souvenir was handed around for everyone to examine, while the conversation went merrily on.

Presently the owner said to his next neighbor: "Kindly pass me the snuffbox." The inquiry went around the table, but nobody knew what had become of the article. A thorough search of the room and the servants failed to reveal any trace of it, and the party broke up in gloom. The story is told that a certain judge who, during the plea of a rather prosy lawyer, could not refrain from gently nodding his head in sleep, was caught at this by the lawyer, who looked significantly at him.

"Perhaps," said the Judge testily and prevaricatingly, "the counsel thinks the Court was asleep, but he may be assured that the Court was merely cogltating."

The lawyer talked on. Presently the Judge, again overcome by his somnolency, nodded off and aroused himself with a little sudden snorting snore.

"If it please your honor," said the lawyer, "I will suspend my plea until the Court shall have ceased to cogltate audibly."

WATER COLOR PAINTING. A book of elementary instruction for beginners and amateurs. By Grace Barton Allen, with illustrations by the author. [Boston: Lee & Shepard.]

The student of art who takes up this little volume will be pleased, not only with the general character of the work, but also with its clearness and directness of style. The volume is a thoroughly practical text-book on the art of painting in water colors; is intended for the use of amateurs, and of those water-color teachers who are not yet sufficiently accustomed as instructors, to realize how much the average pupil does not know. Taking for granted absolute ignorance on the part of the reader, it explains, as far as may be done in print, the technicalities of this branch of art in simple and intelligible language, treating of colors and materials, as well as of flower, landscape, and figure painting in polychrome and monochrome. The author, who has had experience with both public classes and private pupils, alms to convey information in so clear, direct and minute a way that there shall be no possibility of misconception, and has illustrated the book with chapter-headings and tail-pleces which serve as a commentary on the text. Literary Comment,

W HAT is the most important factor in the creation of a work of ditions, moral and esthetic, which writers of fiction must observe if they would invest their work with value and significance? These are the main questions answered by Count Leo Tolstoi in an elaborate review of the literary career of Guy de Maupassant in an article written for Chapman's Magazine (London, February.) The French novelist is used to illustrate and enforce the principles of the art of fiction held by Tolstoi. He finds that Maupassant was truer to art in the early stages of his development than in the latter, but even of the earlier works Tolstoi says:

"He was unfortunately defective in the three chief endowments which, in addition to talent, are indispensable to a true work of art. These are, first, a correct, that is to say, a moral relation of the author to his subject; second, clearness or beauty (they are one a correct, that is to say, a moral relation of the author to his subject; second, clearness or beauty (they are one and the same) of expression; third, sincerity, that is, an unfeigned sense of love or hatred regarding the object which the artist depicts.

"Of these qualities de Maupassant possessed traces only of the two last and was utterly deficient in the first.
He had no correct or moral relation to the subjects he described. Judging by what I had read, I came to the conclusion that de Maupassant possessed talent, that is, an attitude of attention to the facts and events of life, which disclosed to him properties un-perceived by other men; that he had acquired also an excellent style, ex-perceived by other men; that he had acquired also an excellent style, expressing clearly, simply, and prettily what he had to say; and that he could be accredited also with that merit without which a work of art can produce no effect—sincerity. He made no pretense of love or hate, but did indeed so regard the things as he described them.

"But, unhappily, being without what is perhaps the most important factor in the creation of a work of art—a correct moral relation to his subject, which includes a knowledge of the difference between good and evil—he loved and described what was not worthy of affection nor of description, and neither cared for nor related that which was worthy of both."

After analyzing some early novels and a few late ones, Tolstoi proceeds to show the difference between them and the cause of the difference. He says:

"Whatever the artist may depict—to show the difference between them and the cause of the difference. He says:

"Whatever the artist may depict—saints, robbers, kings, footmen—we seek and may see only the soul of the artist himself. And if he be a writer with whose works we are acquainted, then the question is no longer. Who are you? but, 'Well, what more can you tell me that is new? From what fresh standpoint will you illuminate life? Hence no writer who has not a clear, defined novel view of existence and still more none who considers such a view unnecessary, can produce a work of art. He may write much and beaulifully, but he will not produce a work of art.

"Such was the case with De Maupassant. In his first two novels, more especially in 'Une Vie,' there was a clear, novel, definite attitude toward life, and hence there was a work of art; but after he had bowed to the fashionable theory that such an attitude to life is needless, and began to write in order merely faire quelque chose de beau, his novels ceased to be works of art. In 'Une Vie' and 'Bei Ami,' the author realizes whom he should love and whom he should hate, and the reader agrees with and believes him; and believes also in the persons and events he has described.

man or woman, boasting a knowledge of and relish for, the particularly fresh and dainty tid-bits of our modern Scotch literature, who has not read "The Green Graves of Balgowrie," "O'er the Hills and Far Away," and more recently still, "A Daughter of Strife?" It is the lovers of the pen work of James Barrie, Jane Barlow, Ian Maclaren at his best, Kate Douglass Wiggin and Mary Wilkins who have found the books, especially of Jane Helen Findlater, quite after their own heart. Indeed, few readers of "The Green Graves of Balgowrie" will hesitate to admit, since "Margaret Ogilvie" was published, Scotland has produced nomore charming volume than this, written by a woman still well on the sunny side of 30. That was the first public adventure of Jane Findlater, and for the exquisite story told in the most limpid, unaffected English, quite free from knotty Scotch dialect, yet full of as delicate humor and genuine pathos as any of the products of the famous favorites above mentioned, she deserves all the praise the readers of two countries can give her.

Miss Findlater and her sister come, however, quite naturally by their gifts. Their father was a scholarly clergyman of the established church of Scotland, and, dying, he left his wife and two daughters an income such as only dauntless, self-sacrificing, thrifty Scotch or New England people know how to live on in greatest dignity and uncomplaining self-respect. But, strangely enough, in this sordid day, when an author is apt to reckon his merits by the price per thousand words he can command, these sisters, both handsome, young and agreeable, live happily in a very quiet home in the sober, historical old town of Prestonpans, spurred on to efforts with their pens by very much higher ambitions than greed of gain. They are both anden such as only dauntless, self-sacrificing, thrifty are both anden such as her afternoons, to her writing desk.

This is the author's nineteenth century Samaritan: "A certain man went down from Jerusalem to America and fell among the landlords and taxgatherers, which stripped him of his raiment, wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. And by chance there came that way a certain priest, and when he saw him he said, 'Nothing but the gospel can eradicate crime,' and passed by on the other side. And likewise a philosopher, when he came to the place, looked on him and said, 'Suffering is necessary and unavoidable,' and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan ground.

And on the morrow he took out a ticket to the Charity Organization Society and gave it to him that was wounded, and said unto him, Take care of that, and if thou needest more when I come again I will give thee a letter to the woodyard. Which one thinkest thou was neighbor unto him that fell among thieves? And he said, 'He that showed mercy on him and politely turned aside to let him die.'"

McClure's Magazine has been very successful. Its circulation for the last four months has averaged more than 312,000. "The Broom of the War God" is a story of the recent war between the Greeks and Turks, to be published soon by Messrs. Appleton & Co. It is by H. N. Brallsford, who fought in the war as a volunteer in the Foreign Legion, and it embodies his actual experiences in the war.

Charles Scribner's Sons announce a new book by E. W. Hornung, entitled "Young Blood." It is said to have all the elements that have already endeared Mr. Hornung to the fiction-loving public; an absorbing mystery unexplained and tantalizingly baffling up to the very last page; vigorously drawn and life-like characters; a series of adventures and remarkable events which do not flag for an instant, and a direct, forceful power of expression.

Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, the editor of the woman's page of the New York Tribune, is also a writer of reputation, and a woman of pluck, energy and brains. The family home is in Walnut street, Philadelphia, and the account of the author's home life is written by Harrison's Morris, director of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. The late Frank Holl's remarkable portrait of Dr. Mitchell accompanies the article.

dealings have been marked invariably by treachery, arrogance, massacre and murder. Its series of national crimes in American waters and lands began in 1613, and the people are waiting calmly for the decision of the board of inquiry to decide whether the royal course of bloodshed, deceit, misrule and cruelty in the wrecking of the Maine. It may be that this act will be the final scene in the dark tragedy which has been on the boards for nearly 400 years.

Ponce de Leon was the first man who swung the sword on American necks. He learned to shed blood in the wars of Granada. His reward for his killing valor on those fields was a governorship of Porto Rico. He started for new victims in America. The wind carried his three ships into the harbor of St. Augustine in 1613. His adventurers drew their sabers as soon as their feet touched earth. The red men were robbed of their golden ornaments, their bodies left along the coast from the landing point to the southern cape of Florida. The campaign pleased the King of Spain. He summoned the Prince, and eight years later sent him forth with a commission to be ruler of the whole land in the west in case he could subdue or slaughter the Indians. The slaughter was partly executed. He left piles of bodies of savages for the vultures. An arrow from one of his victims pierced his side. He went home to Cuba, wounded in pride and body, to die.

Spain's King started another murdering expedition in 1520. It landed on the shore of South Carolina. The plan was to fool the Indians and then kill all that could not be carried away as galley slaves. The innocents of the wilderness did not know Spanish tactics, They were laden with gold they had found somewhere in the mountains. The moment the boats were filled almost to the water's edge the anchors were weighed. The gold was confiscated. The men and women were put into chains. The angry members of divided families were shot as they tried to rescue wives, husbands and children. The thing pleased the King. Lucas Vasquez was sent the next year of Spain in the ignominous death of its leader.

Pamphilo de Narvaez, a man of no virtue, had the next commission to massacre and pillage. He landed in Tampa Bay in 1528. There were 400 adventurers and cut-throats with him. They carried gorgeous flags and attractive guidons of Castile and Arragon. They killed 2500 natives in a night attack on a village with which they had pretended to be friendly. They wandered all over Florida, and were the first whites to look upon Suwanee River. The mission was a failure. Half of the force starved to death. They left a trail of dead and stole everything they could carry.

He will still conduct McClure's Magnazine, but will try to come at this new work as "though it were the first attempt of his dire, and evolve somthing radically different from anything yet in existence, died and this from the Book Bayer's London letter: "Stephen Philips, the author of 'Christ in Hades', is the 'minor poet'—if, the phrase is not too stupid—who has made most progress in popularity lately. The son of one of the clergy of Peterborough Cathedral, he was educated at Condel in Northamptonshire, and, like A. E. W. Mason, took to the stage—hence his spill in reading his own verses, which he often does to title audiences of his admirers."

We glean the following bit of interesting information from the March Book News: "Mr. Doxey has now in press the first of a series of booklets which he first of a series of booklets which he proposes to issue under the caption of The Lark Classics." This will be the Rubalyst of Omar Khayyam. It will give Fitzgerald's text—first and four editions with notes, and in addition will publish the following, by Ponter Garnett, who, with Galett Burgess, edited the lively little Lark of famous memory.

Spain tried to ply steel to the necks of the English colonists. This attempt lost for them, on Cuba, the Castle Moro, which, in times of modern warfare, is regarded as impregnable. Admiral Pococke led the assault and siege. He had 11,000 effective men and about 3000 negroes. They appeared off the harbor in the latter part of June, 1762. The campaign lasted to midsummer. The heat ruined the provisions and dread fever took men from sound health to death in a few hours. The ocean waves carried the bodies of unburied soldiers. The suffering and sights only increased the valor and determination. The castle fell, the Governor capitulated in August, and Havana came into the possession of the English, along with $10,000,000 in booty.

Spain refused to recognize the Continental Congress, long after the independence of the United States had been established. Juan de Miralez came to Washington in 1778 to live. He went home a little later, because the government found he was a royal spy and intriguer from Madrid. Spain insised in 1781 that the boundaries of the United States on the west should be the Allegheny Mountains, and tried to get the powers to support the command. Franklin said no. Congress backed him. Spain acquiesced, when forced. It acquiesced on many other propositions at the point of threat. The kings kept drawing back from pretenses, and finally the romancers, adventurers and plunderers were left no inch on this northern part of the continent—save Cuba. They have lost overvithing, and Bancroft says it is inch on this northern part of the con-tinent—save Cuba. They have lost everything, and Bancroft says it is retribution for their policy of treach-ery and unfairness.

THE "NEW WOMAN."

A woman's ways in modern days Is something wondrous queer, Their mothers fair, would surely stare With looks akin to fear; They'd wonder why their daughters try To act just like their brothers; To join a club and smoke a stub, To shame their gentle mothers.

They'd wonder why their daughters sigh
For women's rights and "sich," Bleycles ride, and sit astride
A horse, just like a witch;
To wear men's clothers an' tilt their nose
At all the gentle ways
That filled men's hearts with Cupid's darts
In good old-fashioned days.

They'd wonder why their daughters try To fill the place of men. Who earn no bread and may not wed who earn no break and may not wed
The sweetest girl they ken;
They'd know just why their daughters sigh,
And why they may not marry,
Why beauty fades, an' they're old maids
With heavy hearts to carry.

COATS AND CAPES THAT CAPTI-VATE FEMININE FANCY.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.] N EW YORK, March 30, 1898—It is difficult to forbear serious infringement of the tenth commandment during these springy days, when every shop's counter and window is a museum of delicate beauty, when every day is a milliner's or modiste's opening, and when temptations to extravagance beset every path. One of the especial snares for the feminine conscience and when temptations to extravagance beset every path. One of the especial snares for the feminine conscience and purse at this moment is the parasol display. The handles deserving especial notice are rather long and finished either in metal, or for a depth of eight inches from the butt the porcelain and celluloid hilts are painted. The painted scenes are from well-known operabouffe. Every picture encircles the handle it adorns and along with an abundance of treatment in gilt the very tip is finished with some such quaint china figure as a minute frog, mouse, pir or rabbit.

Handles equally alluring are made of gun metal decorated with polished silver, having large imitation cabochon stones set in their ends, else the gun metal is overlaid with bright filligree silver work, and small beveled stones punctuate the silver work here and there.

Chief attention is commanded, though, in behalf of the bright coverings of the rips and in the form of slim, close-shirred, puffed and ruffled bags.

Any woman can flaunt this summer a pretty stout sunshade if she chooses for the very good reason that the majority of most attractive examples are trimmed with ribbons. Satin ribbon about half an inch wide is gathered and sewed in tiny circular flounces, one frill slightly overlapping the other, from the point of the ribs up to the ferrule end. This is a capital device by which a handsome stained or faded sunshade can be renovated quite as nice as new.

Again, ribbons are laid on flat, running from top to bottom of the silk covering, and so arranged as to give the parasol all the aspect of elaborate striping. At the bottom every ribbon finishes off with a loop, thus forming a pretty fringe.

A deal of emphasis is laid on the case into which a closely wrapped sunshade or sun umbrella is thrust when not in active use. Many slik parasols have lace covers frilled at top and bottom; umbrellas display close cases of gayly embossed leather, and the simple taffeta sunshade fits into a shirred case with pinked flounces crisping out above an

GOLF WAISTCOATS AND SHIRTS. Golf has many fashions to account for, and none is more directly due to the influence of this game than the spring craze for wearing waistcoats. Hitherto few women found these little garments anything but an extra burden for their already well-clad shoulders. but from now on the waistcoat promises to become as important an item of feminine as of masculine dress. All winter golfers have worn bright scarlet hand-knitted woolen ones, with silk sleeves, or equally vivid yellow ones, and now on every hand we are offered vests of high and low cut, double and single breast, silk pique, linen, gingham and duck, to use with our shirt waists.

Of prime interest are the scarlet duck and linen waistcoats for wear with any species of coat and skirt, and so popular do they promise to become that every color-loving woman threatens to develop as a rival of robinn redbreast. White carved pearl buttons are used on these and on the equally pretty nankeen, gray, brown and blue linen vests. In addition, white pique duck and salicloth waistcoats are offered, and, saving that darts pull them in to the curves of feminine figures, in all respects these are cut on the masculine pattern.

ing that darts pull them in to the curves of feminine figures, in all respects these are cut on the masculine pattern.

The shirt waists just now before us are all made up and sold with collars of their own material, string ties to match, and we have it ex cathedra that yokes either at back or front, are not in the most recent taste. Many of the prettiest waists fasten up in front with porcelain or celluloid buttons, colored in plaids or figures, or solid tints to exactly harmonize with the shirts on which they serve, and by way of a novelty we have string ties of the thickest gros grain ribbon, barred in bright roman stripes and deeply fringed at either end.

As a matter of fact, though, the women who dress for decoration's sake, are not going to swathe their necks very often in stiff linen and gaudy cravats. With shirts, both of linen and gingham, white muslin and taffets stocks high and soft and completed with a wheel-shaped bow under the chin, will be most highly esteemed. As attractive as anything seen this season are the blue, brown and rose-colored ties of stiff grass linen, selling everywhere. Some of these oddities are woven of a very elastic straw that has a bright satiny finish, and produces about the coolest neckbands possible for hot weather.

OUTING LINENS.

Agreeable to contemplate, with a

outling Linens.

Agreeable to contemplate, with a view to the inevitable dog days, are the well-filled counters of novelty linens. Heretofore we believed everything possible in the way of comfort, convenience and beauty had been accomplished under that head, but since golf has made bull-fighters red the chosen color for all sporting costumes we have new scarlet sail cloths for suits to be worn yachting and on the links. For yachting it is called lateen red and the color is a very good imitation of the picturesque Mediterannean sail. This goods is woven with a handsome selvidge that is freely displayed in the makeup of every coat and skirt.

Not a yard of this, as well as the other outing linens, comes to the shops save in ample width and carefully shrunk. Next after red cloth and drill, brown is the most popular color of the season, but hard pushed for place by several good shades of blue.

Nearly all the drill and duck sold this spring is figured, is white picked cut in small delft or wedgewood blue figures, black dots and lines. An appreciative sye, however, overlooks ver these above-mentioned temptations for the sake of the linens—the wide, tough, lightweight, open-weaved linens in cool navy blue, smoke gray and all shades of brown. The coarsest weaves are the leaders in selling quality, everywhere, and some of the samples most popular are as open of mesh as coffee-sacking or cocoa matting. Utterly have they routed the hot, heavy Russian crash, and not only are they to be had in solid colors, but small checks of two tones of brown or blue, shot stripes, and interwoven like tweed and cheviot, and in dras. Next after foulard and chestic it is one of the most admirable fabrics for demi-toilets.

SUMMER COATS.

A very sharp eye is required to dis-cern the points of difference between the neat walking coat of last season and the model for wear in the present spring. Perhaps there are not quite so many seams in the newest coat, and may be its covert is rather more red-dull colors, enlivened with bright threads.

There are equally interesting rough wash-lined braids to be used in ornamenting these, and it is only fair to say that the piques are so admirable that in summer time they will be suitable for wear at any function, from a house breakfast to a casino dance.

There are figured black mourning piques, guaranteed not to take on the least luster in ironing, and from this, through all the shades from send brown, peacock-blue reseda green, one can purchase it in the palest, prettiest gaslight tints. Mention must be made of the embroidered piques, and not least among the confections of the season is a new goods, which for lack of a better name is called silk and cotton ma-dish in tinge, but there the differentiation ceases, and sleeves that were good form in November are admirable in April.

All things considered the fashions are less fickle than formerly, and there is no indication that long-skirted jackets will arrive before our cosy little bobtailed ones are completely worn out. Examining the subject at all joints, it is easy to discover that braided wraps are still much in vogue, and that fewer capes will be worn in the next six months than we remember for a long time.

Saving the delicate ruffled slik and chiffon collarettes and sturrby Scotch oirculars, the cape, as we loved it two or three years ago, is almost an obsolete garment. There are certain examples of the genus among evening wraps, and women of ample wardsobes still patronize small ones of three flounces, not falling so low as the el-bow, and heavily jeweled, but for women en masse it is no longer known.

THE SHRINKING BLOUSE.

THE SHRINKING BLOUSE.

THE SHRINKING BLOUSE.

Another conspicuous change the spring has inaugurated is the discreet shrinkage of the blouse. Those of slender figure may mourn, but the change was bound to come, and it has been made gracefully. Fronts of coats have roomy, and their is the best that foan be made of it; while any one who halitie latest takes her walks abroad in a coat blouse back and front will serve as a just object for derision. By way of recompense for this diminishing of the body portion, a more generous length of tail has been iet out below the belt, and the art of braiding goes merrily on.

Another conspicuous device is that of trimming very elaborately the fronts of coats with jabots and revers, and the jeweled belt is by no means at the end of its service. Touching the question of shape again, it is self-evident that those cut off from the blouse will take gladly to the short box-shaped jacket, which in summer melton coasert, etc., depends for its orna-

On less sumptuous wraps the buttons are most often supplied of cut steel and of pearl, prettily inlaid with gold and silver. The scarlet serge and melton golf coats have big black buttons, usually of gun metal, with crossed drivers on them in bright metal. A very fair résumé of the best of the new shapes in coats is given in the accompanying illustration. Here it is clearly elucidated that the chief point of interest with regard to summer wraps is its oddity of shape, and is the most important object to strive after.

ILLUSTRATED FASHIONS.

The first figure displays a thoroughly onventional design for covert cloth.

The first figure displays a thoroughly conventional design for covert cloth. Here we have the approved box shape cut just as short as decency allows and set off with flat smoked pearl buttons and tucks. One feature, not advertised in the sketch is the new lining freely employed of late, which is neither silk nor satin, but a silk linen, woven in exactly the covert colors and pronounced not only far cooler, but very much more durable than the taffetas and coat serges hitherto adopted for this purpose.

The next jacket is built of green silk, heavy green peau de sole, that in turn is lined with a pale green silk and the kerchief fronts of the wrap are offset with a rich trimming of jet in broad key pattern on the body sleeves and graduated tails. Black lace frills edge the folding fronts, the collar and garnish the sleeves and this is created an ideal carriage jacket for the spring of '98. Over in Paris these are made up in violet bengaline, royal blue duchess satin and rendered most gorgeous by a lavish treatment with gold and silver spangles, or buillion embroidery.

The third figure in the group is the

and silver spangles or bullion embroidery.

The third figure in the group is the last word in capes of the sturder sort, which are worn when shopping, driving, etc., and the exceeding showiness of the plaid selected only enhances the fashionable value of the garment. At the root of the lofty notched collar a tan leather strap encircles the neck and is finished, back and front, by flat steel buckles, while down the foot three short leather straps, passing through steel buckles, fasten this exceedingly useful wrap.

Black and white, brown, blue and red coats are now made up in drill, duck, sail cloth and sold quite independent of skirts for outing and hot weather wear. One good pattern of a cotton coat is demonstrated in the seventh model.

There is still a third useful type of summer coat made to fall open in a large V from neck to waist, by means of a series of ruffled revers, turning back upon the bust, for in all these easy garments the effort made by the tailors is to display as much as possible of the pretty shirt waist sure to be worn under the cotton wrap. Two large pearl buttons fasten the straps in the first cotton jacket of the heavy blue drill, and black linen frogs decorate the front of the striped coat. This last is clasped at the waist by a belt of braided leather, a new device in girdles and to be highly recommended. Deep violet summer melton, braided ar rather figured in flat bands of stitched-on silk of a light lavender tint is the fifth jacket in the list. Its buttons are large imitation cabochon amethysis.

The sixth model comes under the head exclusively of calling wraps, for the material is pale biscuit-colored French broadcloth, delicately embroidered in dark brown silk, picked out with gold threads. Neck and waist-band, collar, frills and the full pinked ruché down the front are all composed of brown silk.

She resolved not to allow her grief to have a serious effect upon her, but to find some immediate source of support, and took the first opportunity that offered. She had made a specially wholesome grasham bread for a friend here who was suffering from indigestion, and his appreciation of it at once suggested a means of support—she would bake and sell bread. Calling at neighboring residences and boarding-houses, she at once took orders for all she could bake, delivered the bread the same day, and secured regular customers. With the proceeds of successive sales she took in a large supply of materials, and is steadily increasing the profits. She declares that with her ambition she will not remain poor long, and will soon make a big success of her undertaking.

AN ORIGINAL WAY OF SERVING EGGS.

Eggs in some form or other, whether alone or as an adjunct to other viands, seem to be a natural article of food for Easter morning and to lend them an individuality appropriate to the occasion, some slight deviation from the ordinary ways of serving them is desirable. The idea suggested by the accompanying sketch is simple and inexpensive and can be prepared for the meal at odd moments some days in advance.

EGG FARMING,

MANAGING HENS AND A PUBLISHING BUSINESS AT THE SAME TIME.

[FROM A REGULAR CONTRIBUTOR.]

To combine book publishing and poultry keeping is an idea which it takes an enterprising woman to carry out.

This woman is Mrs. Sarah L. Bilss, who is the publisher of the Brooklyn Blue Book, and at her country place, just outside the borough of Brooklyn, and within the limits of Greater New York, she has started a chicken farm.

Commencing less than a year ago with twenty-five chickens, she has now over one thousand fowls, ducks and with twenty-five chickens, she has now over one thousand fowls, ducks and turkeys.

"Is there any money in keeping poultry?" was the question asked of Mrs. Biliss at her Brooklyn office.

"I will give you some notes from my expense book," was the reply, and then you can judge for yourself. Of course, the first year one cannot expect to reap great profits."

"It costs a penny a week to feed a hen. She will lay about one hundred and eighty eggs per year. For these an average price of 3 cents each is given, 4 or 5 cents in winter and 3 cents in summer. If you care to put it down in dollars and cents you might average it in this way:

The materials necessary are a sheet of green tissue paper, and one each of white, yellow, red, pink or any colors desirable which are in accord with the natural colors of the flower, a box of water color paints, some mucilage and a plece of No. 1 green ribbon. Having obtained these, cut from stiff paper patterns of the size and shapes indicated in No. 1 and No. 2 of the illustration.

No. 1 is one and a half inches wide by six and a half inches long, and represents the long, slender leaves of the plant. These should be cut from the green paper, allowing at least three for each flower. No. 2 shows the petals of the blossom, is twelve inches long by four and a quarter deep, and each petal measures two and a quarter inches across its widest part.

In regard to her work as a publisher, Mrs. Bliss conceived the idea three years ago, that Brooklyn was languishing for a blue book. Its novelty to the staid Brooklyn mind caused a furore, and not a few hearthurnings to those who found that they were not of the elect. The compilation was made with many conscientious scruples as to who constituted society. Some important names, unfortunately, were omitted by inadvertence, a mistake which was rectified in another edition.

Mrs. Bliss devotes the business hours of the day to her publishing enterprise, coming in to her office in Brooklyn about 11 o'clock. Up to 19 o'clock in the morning, attired in rubber boots and cap, she has been feeding her chickens, many of them coming to her when called by name.

In the evening, perhaps, she is at the Waldorf, enjoying herself with her friends, chatting, full of fun, and no one could believe that she had been doing a long day's work. She is a handsome woman, with good complexion and sparkling eyes, and every movement denotes grace and energy.

MRS. PEARY HAS NOT YET MET A RUSSIAN LADY'S RECORD.

[FROM A REGULAR CONTRIBUTOR.]

The notable achievements of women are not confined to the temperate zones. It is well known that in 1891, Mrs. Peary accompanied her husband to McCormick Bay, on the northwestern coast of Greenland, where she wintered with him at Red Cliff House (built by the expedition.) in 71 deg/43 min. N. lat., and that, last summer, she and her little daughter, Marie Peary, approached still nearer to the North Pole, reaching Cape Sabine on the Hope. This is the fatal spot from which Gen. Greely was rescued after the death of nineteen comrades, and is 78 deg. N., within 6 deg. of the "farthest north" on land, that of Lockwood and Brainard in 1882.

We all do honor to Mrs. Peary's dauntless courage but she does not stand alone in her achievements. Though her record is spoken of as being unique, there are two women, long since dead, who have more than equaled her record.

In July, 1735, there sailed from Irkutsk, Siberia, down the Lena River, into the Arctic seas, an expedition commanded by a Russian, Lieut. Pronychistshef. He was in search of the "northeast passage." On board the ship was his bride, who, rather than be separated from the man she had just wedded, cheerfully braved the perils—more vague and terrible themof the North, at his side. The old records state that the ship managed, despite the ice, to pass through the most eastern mouth of the Lena, and then sailed northwesterly along the coast, in a passage between the ice, not more than 100 or 200 yards wide, almost reaching Cape Chelyuskin, the northernmost land of Siberia; but here they were forced to winter in lat. 77 deg. 48 min. N. In order to fully appreciate what it meant for a woman to do this it must be remembered that in 1735 great ignorance prevailed as to the conditions of Arctic expeditions on the miserable little sáiling vessels, often hardly fit even to sleep upon, were extremely meazer and could in no way bear comparison with the carefully—fittled up ships sent north in this century.

The party of Pronchistshef lived through the winter, suffering from many fearful privations, and in the spring they broke loose from the ice and headed the ship back. And here, near the mouth of the river Olensk, on this homeward voyage, the courageous little bride died. Her death was followed in two days by that of her brave husband, Lieut. Pronchistshef. Thus ended the first Arctic romance.

This exploit remained unparalleled for over a hundred years, when Mme. d'Aunet, in 1839, visited the Island of Spitzbergen, on board the ship La Recherche, sent out by France, and commanded by Capt. Fabvre. There was also on board a committee of scientists, who accomplished much valuable work. La Recherche salled to Magdalene Bay, Spitzbergen, which is 79 deg. 35 mln. north, two degrees further north than Mrs. Pronchistshef and one and a half farther than Mrs. Peary. Mme. d'Aunet, on her safe return home, describes the cemetery of fishers in Magdalena Bay, the men who lost their lives on that bleak coast. It is the farthest north of any burying ground in the world.

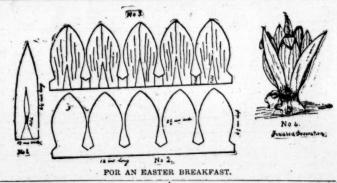

"I counted fifty-two graves in this cemetery" she avery the semetery of several counter of the semetery of the

The coming week will be the second one of the engagement of the Belasco-Phall Stock Company at the Burbank, which promises to be a most enjoyable one for theatergoers and profitable to the managers of the theater and the company. Beginning Monday evening next they will present "Too Much Johnson," a farce comedy by William Gillette, the author of "Secret Service" and "Held by the Enemy." The play is favorably known here as elsewhere. It had long runs in the principal cities of the world and is still running in Parls, where the one thousandth performance of it was recently celebrated. It was seen here about three years ago, and at the same impressed those who saw it as being an excrutiatingly funny play of the unctuous, quiet kind. The forthcoming production will be the first one in this city at prices of admission prevailing at the Burbank. The company is said to be particularly at home in plays of this kind, and furthermore that it is in the main an organization of comedians. "Too Much Johnson" abounds in the usual complications unavoidable in farce comedies, but in this one the plot is more ingeniously brought out and upon novel and untried lines.

Wright Huntington was highly praised by the San Francisco papers for his conception of the part of Billings, and he will play it here. It is a part happily suited to his style of acting, having the natural placidity of temperament that the part requires. George Osbourne will play the bestial Johnson, and a capable interpretation of the character is assured. Essie Tittell will have a nice suitable part in Mrs. Billings, and Marie Howe, who makes her first appearance here with this company, will play Mrs. Batterson, the termagant. Others in the cast will be Florida Kingsley, John T. Nicholson, Frank Cooley, Frank Bacon, Frank Fanning, Ed Crane and Herma Westerfeld.

The modern dromios—"Incog"—is in active preparation and will follow "Too Much Johnson."

Viola Allen will not be the leading woman next season of the Empire Stock Company. She has stellar ambitions and she may be starred with Henry Miller.

Bjorn Bjornson, son of the great tjornson, made his first venture as a ramatist in a play called "Johanne."

It gained a favorable reception. The author had been a popular actor for some time.

Annie Irish will not be the leading woman of William H. Crane's company next season. Her devision, she says, is due entirely to her objection to travel.

E. H. Sothern's failure to know his part in the new play at Rochester the other night is explained by the state-ment that he is on the verge of a nerv-ous breakdown.

Before concluding her engagement in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," Mrs. Fiske expects to produce a new play, adopted by Marguerite Merrington, author of "Capt. Letterblair," from the German. Mrs. Fiske will have the role of a gripple

Mrs. Fiske will have the role of a cripple.

Here's a Morris Barrymore revival story. Some days ago an old friend of the actor, who has recently turned religious, met him on the street, and after a few pleasantries remarked seriously: "Well, Maurico, how is your soul?" "To tell you the truth, old man, I haven't heard from it lately," replied Barrymore. "All my wires are down." Gerhart Hauptmann's "The Weavers" cannot be acted at the new Theater Antoine, although it was played there several years ago at the Theater Libre. But only invited guests or members witnessed that representation, and the Paris censor has seen a difference in the effect of Hauptmann on such an audience and one that pays to see a play.

Frank Daniels will not have a new comio opera next season. He will let Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper have the monopoly of the novelties. Instead, Mr. Daniels will make the nucleus of a repertoire with "The Wizard of the Nile" and "The Idol's Eye." When Miss Ethel Barrymore's engagement to Laurence Irving was announced her father, Maurice Barrymore cabled: "Have just heard of your engagement. Heartist congratulations." [Detroit Free Press:] Audacity is supposed to carry man triumphantly through the world, but Manager Ed Star of the Detroit Lyceum tells a story of an ambitious novice whose prospects were cut short by his superb nerve. It seems the young man had only one line to speak and that was the regulation "My lord, the carriage waits." But thirsting with the desire to make himself known, he came on at his cue, and exclaimed, "My lord, the carriage waits—and I would further add that any man who browbeats or insults a woman is a blackguard and a villain."

He describes the "Flying Ballet," recently produced as a novelty, as given over sixty years ago and discounted Fregoli's performance by showing a programme of a farce called "A Day After the Fair," wherein he impersonated a servant, a drunken cobbler, an itinerant ballad singer, a drummer, a French songstress and a raving maniao. It takes the old people of the stage to keep us from thinking too well of modern achievements and this old actor seems to think things were done pretty well almost eighty years ago.

We of the boundless West have something to be thankful for, even if that something is that we have never fallen under the spell of a great tenor's art in the most popular roles of the modern operatic repertoire. The people of New York mourn, and of Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago the grief is as great because Jean de Reszke has announced that never again will he sing Romeo or Faust in the two Gounod operas. The reason given is that he intends to mount the Wagnerian wave and thus be carried on to greater honors. So it is that, while "countless thousands mourn," we can live in hope of some we can live in hope of some hengrin" or "Tannhauser," fried" or "The Valkyrie." in "Sieg-

It used to be said of Willie Collier that while not exactly independent of the author as far as lines were concerned, he could be trusted to supply any lapse in the dialogue with lines of his own which were quite as humorous as were necessary, and it is a fact that in "The Man from Mexico" he spoke a great many lines which Mr. Du Souchet, the author of the comedy, never knew of until he saw the plece on the stage. It is, therefore, fair to anticipate considerable amusement when Collier appears in his new com-

The report comes from England that Florence St. John is dying. Miss St. John is best known in America by reason of her insistence upon "Sin Jin" as the proper pronunciation of her name, as her singing and acting as Marguerite in "Faust Up to Date" on her only tour of this country were hardly of a character to arouse the enthusiasm which always attended her appearance in London. It must be remembered, however, that once an actor or la singer achieves a genuine success in London, he or she is assured of a continuance in the favor of the public regardless of deterioration on account of age.

[Dramatic Mirror: [The press agent of Koster and Bial's let himself out again last week. In his weekly budget of news concerning the stars at the music halls he referred to Charmion as "the lissome and langurous lady of the lingerlie," and he dignified Clarisse Agnew with the unique title of "the soulful little soubret." The word "soulful," in connection with the little ladies who are addicted to short skirts, and hair of the same kind, is brand new, and deserving of more than passing notice. When the fact becomes generally known that a soubret can really be "soulful," there is no telling what the fluffy-haired little damsels will do. Some of them will probably give up singing coon songs and abandon the festive buck dance, and will insist on rolling their eyes while they sing songs about mother and rivers with banks and things. It is a great thing to be a press agent with a good command of what Sam Bernard calls "college words."

Now that the question as to the ownership of "Hazel Kirke" has been finally passed upon by the courts it may be interesting to recall something about the early vicissitudes of the play and the names of some of the people who have played it. When originally presented Stelle Mackaye considered the character of Dunstan Kirke the most important and the play was named "The Iron Will." This failed to make the kind of impression on the public it was desired to and the result was failure. When it was rechristened "Hazel Kirke" and put on at the Madison Square Theater success was immediate enough to prove that Shakespeare was not altogether correct in his contempt for names. One of the most remarkable matters in this season's theatricals is the sudden and general popularity of Julie Opp, writes Hillary Bell in the Press. A couple of years ago, when she was an humble writer in that humblest field of journalism, the woman's page, of the Recorder, nobody paid any particular attention to this young woman, and she used to go bome on winter nights from her work in Spruce street with the solitary escort of a district messenger boy hired for the occasion. In those days she might be seen wandering through the shops, making notes of the newest styles in bonnets, gowns and lingerie invented for fashionable folk. Now she is one of the fashionable folk. Now she is one of the fashionable folk herself. Her gowns and millnery are designed by Mrs. Robert Arthur Osborn, a society woman who has are designed by Mrs. Robert Arthur Osborn, a society woman who has long been accustomed to have rings on her fingers, bells on her toes and a coach and pair wherever she goes. There was a day when Mrs. Robert Osborn considered herself the best dressed woman in New York. Now she considers Miss Opp the best dressed woman in New York, and the latter opinion is sustained by the approved judges of feminine clothes. There was a day when Julie Opp stood trembling like a Peri at the gate of the paradise of fashion. Now she seems to be its central ornament. There was a day when Julie Opp thought that life on the stage must be too lovely for anything. Now she knows how it is herself. There was a day when Julie Opp was overcome with joy at an introduction to Georgia Cayvan, then the famous leading woman of the Lyceum Theater. Now she occupies the leading woman's dressing-room in Mr. Frohman's fashionable house and holds Miss Cayvan's position. There was a time when Julie Opp thought that heaven was nearby when she took a modest cup of tea in the Waldorf. Now she is the cynosure of every eye in the Waldorf-Astoria and Manager Boldt has conferred on her the freedom of terrapin. The crowd of grandames assembled at the Astoria charky benit performance last week to see Miss Opp paid $5 a ticket for a privilege they might have enjoyed for nothing a couple of years ago. Julie comes high—about six feet high—but the Four Hundred must have her.

And we told him through the cannon, in the sea fight's reek and smother, the little college town of Princeton is that of a pleasant, matronly woman walking briskly along the streets, followed at a distance of two or three steps by a heavily-built man, who seems to have difficulty in keeping up with her. The couple exchange friendly greetings with the people whom they meet as they walk along; they seem to be known to every body in the village, and if the inquiring stranger fails to recognize them any citizen can tell that they are Grover Cleveland and his wife, who, a little more than a year ago, moved out of the White House to make way for their successors. The ease with which a man may step from even the highest official place in this country back to the ranks of ordinary citizenship has often been commented on as one of the unique features of our American scheme of government. In no case has it ever been more strikingly exemplified than in that of the portly gentleman who may be seen any day on the streets of Princeton. Fourteen months ago he was steering the ship of state in its more or less troubled course, while his wife had equal prominence as the first lady of the land. Now they have become as absolutely absorbed into the life of the quiet college town as though Grover Cleveland had never been anything more than one of its well-to-do, easy-going citizens. And he suffers no more from the curious in-terest of the American public than if that public had never thought of be-stowing on him the highest gift within

FOND OF RABBIT HUNTING

This is the ordinary round of the ex-President's daily life, but he often varies it by appearing directly after breakfast in hunting boots and broadbrimmed hat, with a gun across his shoulder. Then he will tramp away across the fields and hills, returning across the heids and hills, returning at night with perhaps three or four rabbits as the day's spoil. Mr. Cleveland was always an ardent sportsman, and his propensity in this direction is ever more marked now that he has more leisure to indulge it. The section of New Jersey in which he lives are trivially in fortile in this direction. is not particularly fertile in this direc-tion, the only game being a few rab-bits, squirrel and partridges, but Mr. Cleveland is not easily discouraged. He has tramped all over the central part of the State and will walk patiently all day long for the sake of a shot or two, stopping now and then to chat with some hard-handed old farmer whom he runs across. All the latter gentry for miles around farmer whom he runs across. All the latter gentry, for miles around know the ex-President. Though they are inveterate enemies of the city sportsmen who occasionally overrun their fields, they are all delighted at a chance to exchange a few words with their distinguished neighbor, and are hugely honored if he will consent to pass an opinion on their home-brewed applejack or hard cider. applejack or hard cider.

Mr. Cleveland has an occasional opportunity to indulge his fondness for fishing. Near Princeton there is a fishing. Near Princeton there is little stream called Mill Brook. which there are a few bass and pike. Some time ago the ex-President noticed it while out driving, and through a mutual friend it was soon intimated to one of the residents of the village. who owns two or three little skiffs in the stream, that Mr. Cleveland would like to try his luck there. The owner of the boats, though something of a fisherman, was appalled at the prospect of piloting the generous bulk of his famous townsman down the swift

ART NOTES.

High prices were paid for mezzotint engravings at a recent London sale. Hoppner's picture of Sir Thomas Frankland's daughters, engraved by W. Ward, brought $1900, and Sir Joshua Reynolds's portrait of the Laddies Waldegrave, engraved by Valentine Green, a proof, $1760.

Portraits of Emperor Menelik and of Ras Maconnen will be exhibited at the next Paris salon by M. Paul Buffet, the young artist who went to Abyssinia instead of Rome on winning the f.10,000 prize last year. He tried to paint a portrait of Queen Taitu, but after nosing for one day she refused to continue, as she could not sit still long enough.

The less important annual art exhibitions are in progress in Paris, and, while there are some fine works shown, the major part, according to the critics, is, on the whole, inferior. The event of the year, and of this year in particular, is the salons united under one roof. The buildings where these exhibitions have taken place in the past are demolished to make room for the buildings for the exposition of 1900.

The famous Krum's collection will be sold at auction next month in Antwerp. It is especially rich in pictures of the Dutch, Flemish and French schools. The Rembrandt in the collection, which represents an Armenian in a rich velvet gown with many jewels, has been frequently engraved, and the splendid Memling, the "Cruci-fixion." is also a well-known picture. Among the modern French works are rare examples of Corot, Melss-mier, Troyon, Decamps and Millet.

Troyon, Decamps and Millet.

A prix de Parls has been established in Hungary on similer lines to the prix de Rome in France. The budget of the Fine Arts was being discussed, when the Abbe Hock made a speech, in which he contrasted the art of France and Germany, pointing out that if Hungary wished to have an individual artistic existence it should turn to France, and suggested that nothing could be better than to establish a prix de Paris and an open school of art in the French capital. With which views M. Vlassics, the Minister of Public Instruction, expressed himself as entirely in accord.

It will strive to encourage the fine arts in many directions and in the broadest spirit, especially agitating for beauty and good taste in civic architecture, town parks, public sculpture and painting, and will keep its members informed of what is being done in such matters in the various cities.

done in such matters in the various cities.

[New York Mail and Express:] A little collection of eighteen landscapes, six by Homer Dodge Martin and ewelye by Alexander H. Wyent, occupies the Macbeth gallery in New York. The works of Wyant and Martin are too well known to need much comment at this late day. Before Wyant died in 1892, his farme among collectors as one of the leaders, in a quiet, powerful sort of way, among American landscape men, was widespread. As to Martin, his death at the beginning of 1896 was looked upon by the devoted audience for whom his work was done as nothing less than a calamity. Although each of these two painters had come to his full maturity of thought and of style, the quality of their latest productions showed no falling off from the high standards of their prime. In the Macbeth gellery are pictures that date from only a few months before the death of each artist. Comparing them with the works of their early lives, and also with pictures done a few years before their careers ended, one may note the steady development of ideas and the perfecting of technical powers.

Horse Breeding by Farmers.

[Western Rural:] The average farmer who grows several kinds of grain and maintains three or four kinds of live stock usually has but an incidental interest in horse breading. Teams are required to do the work on the farm. If one operates a farm dairy and has poultry products and fruit and vegetables, where deliveries must be made to the city or village must be made to the city or village every day, he has constant use for a roadster team. Where a farm is devoted almost exclusively to meadow or pasture and orchard lots, the work may be done largely by the mediumsized teams. Such a proprietor who has a real liking for a horse, and who takes pride in training and fitting his teams to good serviceable work and graceful appearance, may breed this style of equine successfully. A good foundation for breeding, however, is always imperative, if one would succeed.

The average roadster horses of high quality, while very intelligent and kind in disposition, are somewhat sensitive and nervous, because of their high instinct and powers of quasireasoning. Because of this delicate organization, much more training and handling will be required for such horses, and this should be begun, it possible, before the youngster is month old. There should be no feeling that this time given to training in youth is wasted. If the creature is kept for one's own work, its excellence and efficiency during a quarter of a century, and its faithfulness and alert movement will many times repay for kept for one's own work, its excellence and efficiency during a quarter of a century, and its faithfulness and alert movement will many times repay for the time devoted to its early lessons. Such a colt, properly trained, also in times of business prosperity will sell readily, because of its training, for from three to ten times the amount it would bring as a crude, untrained animal at four or five years of age.

As a rule, the roadster horse should weigh, when mature in growth, at 5 years, not less than 1100 pounds. For heavy work on the ordinary farm three such horses worked abreast will do as much heavy plowing or harrowing, as a rule, as the largest pair of draft animals. Their all-round adaptation to many kinds of farm and road work renders them especially serviceable. Three such horses on a small farm of cless than eighty acres will afford during the greater part of the year, a good double team and a single driver for use at the same time. When one of the pair may be sick or lame the third horse may take its place, so that there is ordinarily always a team to be relied upon. If possible, on the average farm of 100 acres or more, two good teams of this sort should be maintained. Where convenient, four mares, to be used alternate seasons for breeding, furnish a profitable investment. In fact, where the work of the farm is not very burdensome, all may be used for breeding alternatively, one pair from a city or village, whose principal business is fattening hogs, cattle and sheep, and growing grain for this purpose on more than half of his farm, it is desirable, where his work requires more than one team, that he employ large draft mares. One such team may to advantage be of medium weight—about 1400 pounds at maturity—and another should weigh not less than 1600 acres on the future off-reading alternatively one pair for the alternatively and another should weigh not less than 1600 acres and worked moderately through at least eight months of the year. The influence on the future off-through at least eight months of the year. The influence on the future off-spring engendered by labor is of much value, and the physical strength de-rived from the work is of value to the dam in such cases.

Autumn colts, as a rule, are preferable in the case of draft animals, interfering less with the heavy spring work when horses are most needed. Where warm box stalls are provided for the dam and young in cold weather there is an advantage in training the colt to eat the proper grain for its best development and withhelding it from the trazing grounds until its frame is more mature.

ENTAL PLATES OF FLEXIBLE RUBBER.

Our New Process of Flexible Dental Plates is as yet but little understood by the public, and less understood by dentists in general. It has many advantages over the ordinary rubber plate—even gold plates—being lighter and thinner. The p'ate being flexible—only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper—fits closer to the mouth, will last longer and is tougher than any other rubber. Once this description and is tougher than any other rubber. Once tried no other plate will be desirable. Brought to the notice of the public through Dr. Schiffman only.

I have just had nine roots taken out by the Schiffman method; they were extracted without the slightest pain, and I heartily recommend it to all D. C. MORRISON, Judge PoliceCourt.

Two badly ulcerated roots; asplendid, safe and easy operation.
REV. SELAH W. BROWN, University.

A son of Gov. McCord of Arizona says: It affords me pleasure to add my name to the list of fortunate ones who have had teeth extracted without a particle of pain by Dr. Schiffman. His method certainly robs the dental chair of all its horrors.

H. J. McCORD, Yuma, Ariz.

Averse to giving certificates for advertising purposes, I am impelled to give this one for the good it may do others. Dr. Schiffman extracted a badly ulcerated tooth for me without pain. W. H. WHELAN.

Pastor First Baptist Church, Azusa, California.

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain.

REV. SAM JONES.

The Great Evangelist and Candidate for Governor of Georgia Gives Out His Belief.

66] HAVE sent men to the Keeley Institute to take the Treatment," said the Rev. Sam Jones, "and I have paid their expenses. Christianity is the best thing on earth, but there is no use talking Christianity, or any other 'anity' to a man who drinks-a man under the paw of the tiger. You must get a man sober before you can give him religion. I put little faith in the man who gets religion when maudlin drunk or feebly sick. He is then 4, afraid the devil is going to get him, and he promises like a good fellow until the scare is over.

"I have met hundreds of Keeley graduates, and I can only recall three who have ever gone back to romp with the tiger.

"My brother-in-law was the worst drunkard that ever lived. I sent him to the Keeley Institute, and I never look at him now without saying: 'What a marvelous work of the Keeley Cure.'

"My own reasons for being sober are my boys, my wife, my fellows, myself and my God.

"I believe that God is in the Keeley Cure as much as I believe the devil is in the saloons."
